The wise old Greek told the tyrant that the world would become happy when kings became philosophers or philosophers became kings. The tyrant did not like the suggestion.

Religion resists any suggestion of change or modification, and quite naturally, since modification is confession of an earthly origin.

The rabbi remembers how the great synagogue in Spain excommunicated Maimonides, with many curses, because the wise "rambo," translating Greek philosophy into Hebrew, interested and used new Hebrew words, the old Hebrew language possessing no words to express abstract thought.

RICKARD'S BODY IS TAKEN TO NEW YORK

quickly to Mrs. Rickard, put an arm around her shoulders, and led her from the room.

DEMPSEY relieved the widow of the funeral arrangements and in statement just before entraining, indicated that he intended to assume part of the responsibilities that death snatched from the hands of the promoter.

"I will return to Miami Beach from New York right after the funeral," he said. "We will carry on the plans and ideas for the future that Rickard created.

"I am terribly grieved over the sudden demise of Tex. I have lost the best pal I ever had. Not only myself but the whole sporting world has lost its best friend."

WITH the courage with which he had looked level-eyed at fate on the hard and hazardous days of Goldfield, Tonopah and the Yukon, Rickard battled with death up to his last minute of consciousness. When he was permitted to see Jack Dempsey for a moment Saturday, he told the fighter that he felt certain of winning.

But the odds against him were too great. His store of vitality lowered by the four-day fight, there was nothing in reserve to meet the greater crisis and fight off the spreading infection.

Death came to him in a setting of luxury and recreation typifying the play-time hours for which Rickard had never found time until last year. He came to Miami Beach a year ago and for a winter's visit and later bought a home here.

Rickard Career as Colorful as Fiction

NEW YORK, Jan. 7—Tex Rickard's death has cut short a career as colorful as any that are to be found within the covers of romantic fiction. The man so lived his life in a series of glamorous episodes that it captured the popular fancy and made of him a figure almost unreal to the ken of commonplace existence. The hero never dies in the pages of a novel but Tex Rickard is dead today and, somehow, the fact seems not quite credible. He was an institution.

There is no doubt, however, that, in leaving this life, Rickard has tasted to the full of its sweet and of its bitters. He crowded several centuries of experience into the 57 years he knew on earth.

Ran Gambling House

Cow puncher, town marshal in the tough days of the west's last men, Alaskan prospector, driver of a covered wagon pioneering its way across the plains into the great unknown—these were some of Rickard's early experiences. He ran a gambling house in Dawson where gold and the lure of the Yukon alike held men in a vivid, icy grip and he ran it into the ground. Broke. It wasn't a new experience.

Wood chopper for the river steamers, odd-jobs man — just doing the best he could. Sixty thousand dollars, his all, blown in that Dawson gaming venture. At this juncture, it looked like a life of unremitting toil and obscurity for Rickard. How different the actuality!

Decides on Fight

Came other years and other gold rushes. One of them took Rickard to Goldfield, Nev., where he opened another "palace of chance" and began to prosper. Old timers referred to Rickard's "place" as being on the level always and, if the man eked out a comfortable income thereby, he undoubtedly deserved it.

Then the inspiration! He would bring the Gans-Nelson lightweight championship to Goldfield. Just a hunch, but it was to alter the tide of a life time beyond all recognition and carry Rickard into the world of men and big things as the greatest boxing promoter of the ages. This one fight didn't do it; it was only the start.

And the finish? Nine million dollars in gate receipts on heavyweight championships alone within the last eight years. A million dollars in his own right, a chateau in Miami, Florida, a private yacht, the proprietor of a gilded palace of sports, the associate of men famous in the arts, in the professions and in finance. A man admired, respected, sought after, his favors regarded as the largess of royalty. Of a certainty, fiction is belied!

Barely out of his swaddling clothes, the young Rickard, one of five children, migrated from Kansas City to the great Texas plains, and there with his family, settled in Sherman, Texas.

Father-Stricken

The elder Rickard, a millwright by trade, found it hard to support his family in Sherman, and when he heard of glowing prospects further west, huddled his family into a covered wagon and pushed on to Henrietta, Tex.

In 1880, when Tex was 10 years old, his father was stricken and it was necessary for the boy to materially contribute to the support of his family.

When Tex was 16 he was engaged to go with a herd of cattle all the way up to Montana, and several years later he was elected town marshal of Henrietta, Texas, the scene of his boyhood.

The year 1895 saw Rickard in Alaska. He struck gold, and when he sold out his interest in the "find" he had some $50,000 in gold dust. Then he got the gambling fever, and opened a gambling house at Dawson where he also acted as banker for the miners.

This venture in Alaskan gambling cost Tex every nickel he owned, and he left Dawson flat broke. And, not having the wherewithal for further prospecting, he cut cord wood for the river steamers, which paid the magnificent sum of $15 a cord.

Goes to 'Friard

July 4, 1898, as a red letter day in the life of Tex Rickard and in the social life of the Yukon, for it was on this day that Tex, in company with a man named Murphy, opened up a gambling house and sold liquor at 50 cents a drink. Here the men played faro and roulette, and Rickard recalled that the receipts on the opening day were in excess of $600.

When Tex tired of the strenuous life of the Yukon, he hit out for San Francisco, landing in California with little better than $50,000 in gold dust.

The lust for adventure took him down into the Tonapah and Goldfield country.

With his feet propped up on his desk, scanning a newspaper in his office at Goldfield, Nevada, the idea of promoting a prize fight first occurred to Tex. Impulse, and nothing more, inveigled Tex Rickard into the fight game. The item which had caught Tex's eye in the local newspaper referred to a possible fight between Joe Gans and Battling Nelson and of the chances of finding a likely place to hold the exhibition.

Almost before he knew what he was about, he had sent a message over to Nolan, Bat Nelson's manager.

"How much would you want to hold the Gans-Nelson fight in Goldfield," read the wire.

The price was $20,000. To make a short story shorter the Gans-Nelson fight, as every fight fan knows, was held in Goldfield, and Rickard was on his way to permanent fame and fortune.

His career as a promoter was a brilliant one including such outstanding exhibitions as the Dempsey-Willard, the Dempsey-Carpentier, the Dempsey-Firpo, the Firpo-Wills, and the two Tunney-Dempsey fights.

AIGLER SAYS STATE TO KILL PENCE LAW

Predicts Cooper Campaign Pledge Will Be Carried Out

COLUMBUS, Jan. 7—Prediction that the Pence act regulating rates collected by public utilities in Ohio will be repealed at this session of the state legislature was voiced today by Senator Allan G. Aigler, Hellerne, Republican floor leader in the senate.

"During the last campaign, Gov.-elect Myers Y. Cooper pledged himself to the repeal of the Pence law," Aigler said. "He has affirmed this pledge since the election.

"There has been considerable speculation as to the attitude of the legislature regarding the repeal of the Pence law. "I have made no effort to poll the members of the general assembly, but believe a majority of both branches of the legislature will vote for the repeal of this act. I shall vote for its repeal.

"I shall, also, favor sufficient appropriation (of state funds) for use by the state public utilities commission so that an adequate force can be maintained to insure the prompt and speedy appraisal of all properties where an increase of rates is involved. There is no reason why the public utilities commission should not be able to dispose of all ordinary cases within six months after the case is filed, provided a sufficient staff of engineers, appraisers and other employes is maintained."

RAILROADER KILLED, FIVE HURT IN CRASH

Pennsylvania Milk Train Hits Switch Engine in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7—One man was killed and five others seriously injured early today in a collision between a Pennsylvania railroad milk train and a switch engine in the Frankford section of the city.

Another serious wreck was narrowly averted as a fast Washington-New York express bore down on the scene. Frantic signals by a railroad detective brought the flyer to a halt less than 500 feet from the debris.

Misunderstanding of signals is blamed for the tragedy.

Walter Campbell, 60-year-old Bristol, Pa., conductor, was killed instantly when both crews were hurled in various directions by the force of the impact. His skull was fractured when his head struck a rail. C. J. Fee, 23, brakeman, of this city, suffered a possible fracture of the skull; Harry L. Evans, 29, fireman of Bristol, received cuts and bruises and internal injuries; S. W. Eggaling, 32, of North Merchantville, N. J., engineer, sustained fractured skull; J. T. Callahan, 26, fireman, of this city sustained a possible broken back and W. H. Lauxreder, 38, an engineer, of this city, received cuts and bruises in the accident.

TAKE OFFICE OATH AS SESSION OPENS

present session is greater than that of any other session of the general assembly of Ohio. Of the 164 solons, 133 are Republicans and 31 are Democrats. There are 155 male and nine women members of the legislature. The house minority is the smallest in the history of this state.

Governor Donahey is expected to transmit his final message to the legislature tomorrow. Governor-elect Cooper is to send his first message to the solons next week, probably Tuesday.

During a joint session in the house tomorrow, senators and representatives will formally canvass the vote cast at the November election for constitutional state officers, including governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, treasurer and auditor, and ratify their election. These officials are to be sworn in and will enter upon their new terms next Monday.

Before recessing tomorrow or Wednesday until next Monday, the solons are scheduled to pass an emergency appropriation bill to take care of salaries of state officials and employes, various operating expenses of state departments and institutions and contemplated highway construction, maintenance and repair during the first six months this year.

Brown To Be Inducted

This appropriation bill, as drafted, provided for the expenditure of approximately $25,000,000, including $6,000,000 for new roads, an equal amount for maintenance and repairs of highways, and $13,000,000 to be paid out of the state's general revenue fund, for operating expenses of state departments and institutions.

Upon his induction into office as lieutenant governor next Monday, former State Rep. John T. Brown, Mechanicsburg, Champaign county, will succeed Braden as presiding officer in the senate. At the November election, Braden was elected for the "short term" as lieutenant governor and Brown for the "long", or two-year, term.

Cooper is expected to ask the legislators to enact legislation which will carry out pledges made by the governor-elect to Ohio voters during the campaign last fall. These include repeal of the Pence act and the law, enacted at the session here two years ago, increasing the tax on foreign insurance companies to 3 per cent from 2½. The Pence act permits public utilities to collect increased rates, after filing a bond with the state utilities commission, prior to final decision by the commission as to whether it will approve, or reject, the increased rates.

Lists Bill Coming

The joint legislative committee on economy in public service, which was selected at the session two years ago, will ask the solons to pass measures providing for consolidation of certain state bureaus, abolition of others, the transfer of various activities and institutions from one state department to another, and for the creation of new departments, boards and offices, all with a view to increasing the efficiency and lowering the cost of state governmental operations.

Some of the bills scheduled to be introduced during the present session will seek to provide for:

Licensing auto drivers; revising the state election code; permanent registration of voters in cities of 15,000 population or more; a new state office building; an aviation code; a state police force; old-age pensions; prohibition of the use of cigarettes; prohibition of Sunday dances; a county, or rural, court system to supplant activities of justices of the peace, particularly relative to enforcement of prohibition and traffic laws; recodification of the state's criminal laws; reducing from 4 per cent per month to 1½ per cent the interest which chattel loan companies may charge on personal property loans; limiting the rate on second mortgage loans to 8 per cent per year with a maximum service charge of not more than two per cent; an equal wage for women workers, with a view to providing work for unemployed men and to prevent exploitation of women by certain manufacturers; free hunting and fishing licenses for honorably discharged soldiers and sailors; higher fines and longer imprisonment for habitual criminals; uniform signals for auto drivers; penalizing vehicle drivers who "cut off" funeral processions; authority to physicians to prescribe one pint of whisky, instead of a half-pint, as at present; sale of Ohio canal lands; appropriation of many millions of dollars from the state treasury and from various state funds to carry out building programs and to defray operating expenses of state departments; collection of additional taxes in order to make the state's receipts of taxes equal its expenditures each year for governmental activities.

Detective Slater was to personally question the five suspects under arrest in the county jail here today. He has devoted the past two days since he was retained to conduct the probe, to coordinating the mass of evidence gathered by Wayne county and Orrville officers. This evidence has been accumulating over a period of 10 days since Melvin's disappearance.

The county investigation passes into new hands today. Clark Shearer, newly-elected sheriff, takes over the reigns from Sheriff Jacob, who has had charge of the probe until this time. Sheriff Shearer is bringing an almost entirely new staff of deputies into office with him.

KENTON YOUTH WINS IN PEACE CONTEST

Vernon Hooker, 15, and Sophomore, Will Represent Eighth District

(Special to The Star)

UPPER SANDUSKY, Jan. 7—Vernon Hooker, 15, sophomore in the Kenton high school, Hardin county was awarded the gold medal as winner of the eighth congressional district Prince of Peace contest held at the Trinity Evangelical church in this city last night.

Florence Heinlein, 14, sophomore in the Mt. Zion centralized high school in Crawford county, was given second place by the judges.

With each of the contestants standing head and shoulders above him, Hooker stood out as the mightiest declamer of them all. Using as his subject, "American Obstacles to International Fellowship," by Lynn Harold Hough, Hooker with clear concise words and fitting gestures placed before his audience a plea for peace. Critics in oratory declared the youth showed exceptional ability and stage presence.

Running a close second was Miss Heinlein who announced as her subject "The Seeds of War," by Charles E. Jefferson displayed unusual oratorical ability and excellent training.

To Represent District

Hooker will now represent the district at the state final contest at Columbus to be held in connection with the state pastors' convention, Jan. 21 to 24.

Others in the contest, all of whom had won silver medals in the county elimination contests, were: Margaret Kunze, 15, of Mt. Gilead, Morrow county; Roy Green, 18, of Marseilles, Wyandot county; Merton Porter, 16, Marion county; Paul Temple, 16, Hancock county.

The Rev. O. F. Lauxbaum, of the Mt. Zion Community church in Crawford county presided, music being furnished by the Evangelical orchestra and choir with a vocal solo by Thelma McLaughlin. Judges of the contest included Supt. E. S. Dietrich of Bucyrus; Prof. R. A. Garrin of Marion and Prof. T. N. Traxler of Findlay.

throughout the morning, and it was said that two other state engineers will follow him to the stand.

The Logan Gas Co. claims that the valuation should at least be $20,500,000, nearly twice the amount of the tentative valuation.

Maullar, of Chillicothe, Republican, a minority member of the commission, Saturday issued his dissenting opinion. The valuation of $10,760,000 was fixed by William Klinger, of Lima, and James Huffman, of Columbus, Democratic members of the commission, in an order issued Nov. 19.

Maullar's Contention

Maullar contended the procedure of the commission in arriving at its tentative valuation was illegal. He claimed it improperly reduced overheads and failed to make ample provision for a going concern value. He claimed, also, that the commission should have included in its valuation undeveloped gas fields involved in the company's leaseholds and should not have excluded all cost of financing.

Maullar did not indicate what he thought the tentative valuation should be.

The rates ultimately agreed upon by the commission are not likely to end the controversy. Appeal to the courts is regarded as a certainty.

EIGHT ROB THEATER AFTER GUN BATTLE

New York Police Comb City for Bandits; 2,500 in House Hysterical

NEW YORK, Jan. 7—The war between Police Commissioner Whalen and gangsters flared anew today as police combed the city for eight gunmen who robbed the Fox Folly theater of $2,500 in Brooklyn last night after winning a gun battle with policemen in the crowded theater.

Some 2,500 hysterical men, women and children, patrons of the motion picture house, frantically ducked for cover as the lobby was riddled by a rain of bullets. One policeman was wounded and one gunman was believed to have been hit. The bandits escaped in an automobile which later was found abandoned with 27 bullet holes in the tonneau. The floor and cushions were blood-spattered.

The robbery was one of the most daring in Brooklyn's history. The bandits had to fight their way from the manager's office to the street, a distance of about 70 feet. Eight policemen outside the theater fired a barrage of bullets at the car as it tore through the streets, but the gunmen escaped with $2,500 from the theater's box office.

MISSIONARY WORK MAKING PROGRESS

Outlook Bright for 1929, Reports to Local Ministers Show

The missionary outlook for 1929 is hopeful from the standpoint of the Marion County Ministerial association, which met this morning at 10 o'clock at City Library in its first meeting this year. One of the reasons given is the organization of indigenous churches in China and Japan.

The mission churches in these countries were of various denominations and all separate organizations. After the revolution in China, when the missionaries had all left, the Christian Chinese banded these missions into one big church and did away with all denominational feeling.

The same policy was put into effect in Japan and has been a success there, too. The ministerial association believes that it is up to the American churches to watch the outcome of this organizing of churches and to help in an advisory capacity.

The meeting, opened with devotionals by the Rev. E. Radebaugh, pastor of Calvary Evangelical church. Two pastors, the Rev. L. S. Green, of Kirkpatrick and the Rev. L. C. McFarland, of Caledonia, were received as new members of the association.

Nine registrations have been made to date to attend the state pastors' association meeting at Columbus, Jan. 21, preceding the Ohio Conference of Church Women and the Ohio Laymen's convention there Jan. 22-24.

The meeting scheduled for Jan. 21, has been postponed until Jan. 28 on account of the association meeting at Columbus.

here, so father told me to come here. Nobody was at home so I thought I would stay until they got here."

Taken to Shelter

The men lifted the little girl and carried her down the stairs. Across the street a show was dismissing. Other little girls dressed in warm clothes clinging to the hands of their parents, were climbing into automobiles waiting to whirl them to homes heated by warm furnaces.

The men took the little girl to a nearby store. Heat soon restored her spirits. "How long will it be before the people across the street get home?" she queried.

Proper authorities were notified and relief was immediate. This morning coal, food and clothing were sent to the little girl's house and the world has taken on a rosier aspect even if the wind still sends the tiny flakes into swirling gyrations.

FATHER CHASES SON TO HALT MARRIAGE

"Automobile Lochinvar" Goes Toward Columbus with Matrimonial Intent

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Jan. 7—Facing the zipping air, Cupid was perched on the radiator of an automobile today in a road race between father and son from this city to Columbus, Ohio.

Curtiss Franch, 20-year-old high school graduate, "automobile Lochinvar," was believed speeding in an automobile across New York state enroute to Columbus, with his dad, William F. Franch, in hot pursuit in another car in an effort to overtake the son and prevent a wedding ceremony.

The father, it was stated, opposed the wedding plans of his son, who recently was graduated from Central high school. The father thought Curtis should get a start in life before entering matrimony. However, young Franch decided differently and rode away yesterday.

A short time later, upon learning of his son's departure, the father left here in an effort to overtake him.

The name of the Columbus girl young Franch was speeding to marry was not known here.

United States Urges More Strict Control

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7—Urging more strict control over the world-wide drug traffic under the international opium convention of 1912, the United States narcotic control board today submitted its formal report to the advisory drug committee of the League of Nations.

The control board, consisting of the secretaries of state, treasury and commerce, declared that "the government must continue to report that there are large quantities of narcotic drugs smuggled into the country but that dope addiction in the United States probably is on the decline."

TREATY RESOLUTION WILL BE DEFEATED

Irreconcilable Band Fighting Losing Battle, Poll Shows

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7—The senate's old irreconcilable band was fighting a losing battle today for adoption of a "resolution of explanation" in connection with American ratification of the Kellogg-Briand anti-war treaty.

An incomplete poll of the Senate by International News Service indicate they would muster less than a score of votes for their explanatory resolution. Its defeat seemed assured, since the whole group of League of Nations Democrats have united with administration leaders to ratify the treaty without condition.

The treaty fight entered its second week with Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Democrat of Montana, scheduled to conclude the defense of the compact. Thereafter the irreconcilables will have a clear right of way to debate the treaty as long as they please. If the debate indicates a filibuster is being conducted against ratification, administration leaders plan to invoke night sessions. The present program will be directed toward securing ratification before the end of the week.

The Marion county grand jury, which convened today for the January term, had only two cases to consider. One was that of George F. Schmidt, held on three charges of passing worthless checks. The other was that of William Heintz, charged with automobile stealing.

Alfred Donithen began his duties as prosecuting attorney this morning by placing the cases before the grand jury. The prosecutor expected the jury to report late this afternoon.

The petit jury is scheduled to meet next Tuesday for the first time in the January court term.

Nose Cleared Up—Cold Relieved Instantly

The quick relief which came to A. L. Gillis is typical of experiences in numbers of Marion homes.

For three days the different remedies he used failed to check the cold in his head. Then he consulted his doctor, who advised double strength doses of Ayer's Pectoral—a hospital certified medication of wild cherry, terpin-hydrate, etc., which clears up the breathing passages.

Relief began instantly. He felt the comforting, healing warmth—from his nose passages deep down into his chest—and in a few hours congestion began to loosen up. Next morning he was breathing freely through his nose and in a day or so all traces of the cold were gone.

Tempting to Take and Soon Ends Child's Cold

The six-year-old daughter of Mrs. E. M. Martin contracted a severe cold which started spreading so fast it was necessary to call the doctor. On his advice then she gave double doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral every half hour until congestion was relieved—then once every two hours. By supper time the child felt lots better and ate heartily for the first time in several days. That night she was able to sleep without coughing and in a day or so was rid of the cold and back at school.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

This "hospital certified" medicine quickly penetrates and heals inflamed linings of the air passages. Absorbed by the system it helps allay congestion and drive out the cold from the nose passages, throat and chest.

Just a few pleasant spoonsful of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person tomorrow. Endorsed by leading druggists.

TRIPLE ACTION

Ends coughs the Medical Way

No other cough syrup has it!

Home from shopping—sick—"grippy"—coughing

Feels fine again next day . . .
"Triple Action" worked fast!

"I CERTAINLY felt sick when I came home from shopping. I thought I had a good case of the grippe. Immediately I took some Smith Brothers Cough Syrup. In an hour my cough was beginning to disappear. The bound, tight feeling in my throat was loosened. My cough stopped. Although I thought that I was in for several weeks of sickness, in a day I felt as fine as a fish again.

"Smith Brothers' worked wonders with me—I know it saved me from a long sickness."

First George, then Patty—sick with coughing spells!

Both got well over night . . .
Triple Action did it!

"YOU know how it is with two children in the house. First George got sick and naturally Patty caught it. They were coughing all over the place.

I put them both to bed and gave them both Smith Brothers Cough Syrup. Within an hour they were so improved that they wanted to get out of bed again, but I made them stay in bed and gave them Smith Brothers (which by the way, they love to take because it tastes so good), and in the morning both Patty and George were quite well again!"

MRS. A. SPICER

Since 1839 Smith Brothers have been the nation's cough relief experts . . . Smith Brothers Triple Action Cough Syrup—developed after years of research—is medically and scientifically right.

One teaspoonful of Smith Brothers Triple Action Cough Syrup—and you feel better! Coughing calms down, throat "tickle" stops, the groggy "grippy" feeling is gone!

Triple Action works thoroughly and quickly: 1—it soothes, 2—is mildly laxative, 3—clears air passages.

Safe for children! It has the famous cough drop flavor.

Why We Go to "Market"

Our buyers will leave for "market" in a few days now, which means a visit to the furniture exhibition buildings in Grand Rapids and Chicago.

These "markets," at which we do most of our buying, are held semi-annually—during January and July.

The reason we go to the expense and time necessary to attend the markets is because all of the big furniture factories show their new styles. (There are over 3,000 furniture factories). We go to see the very latest in construction finish and design. We go to inspect, to compare, to choose the very best. We compare prices, finish, style, construction. We do this because we do not buy from traveling salesmen's photographs, as is the custom with many stores. We do not believe that you would want to buy from photographs—you want to see what you are buying.

That's just one more reason why you will find Schaffner's a fine store to patronize.

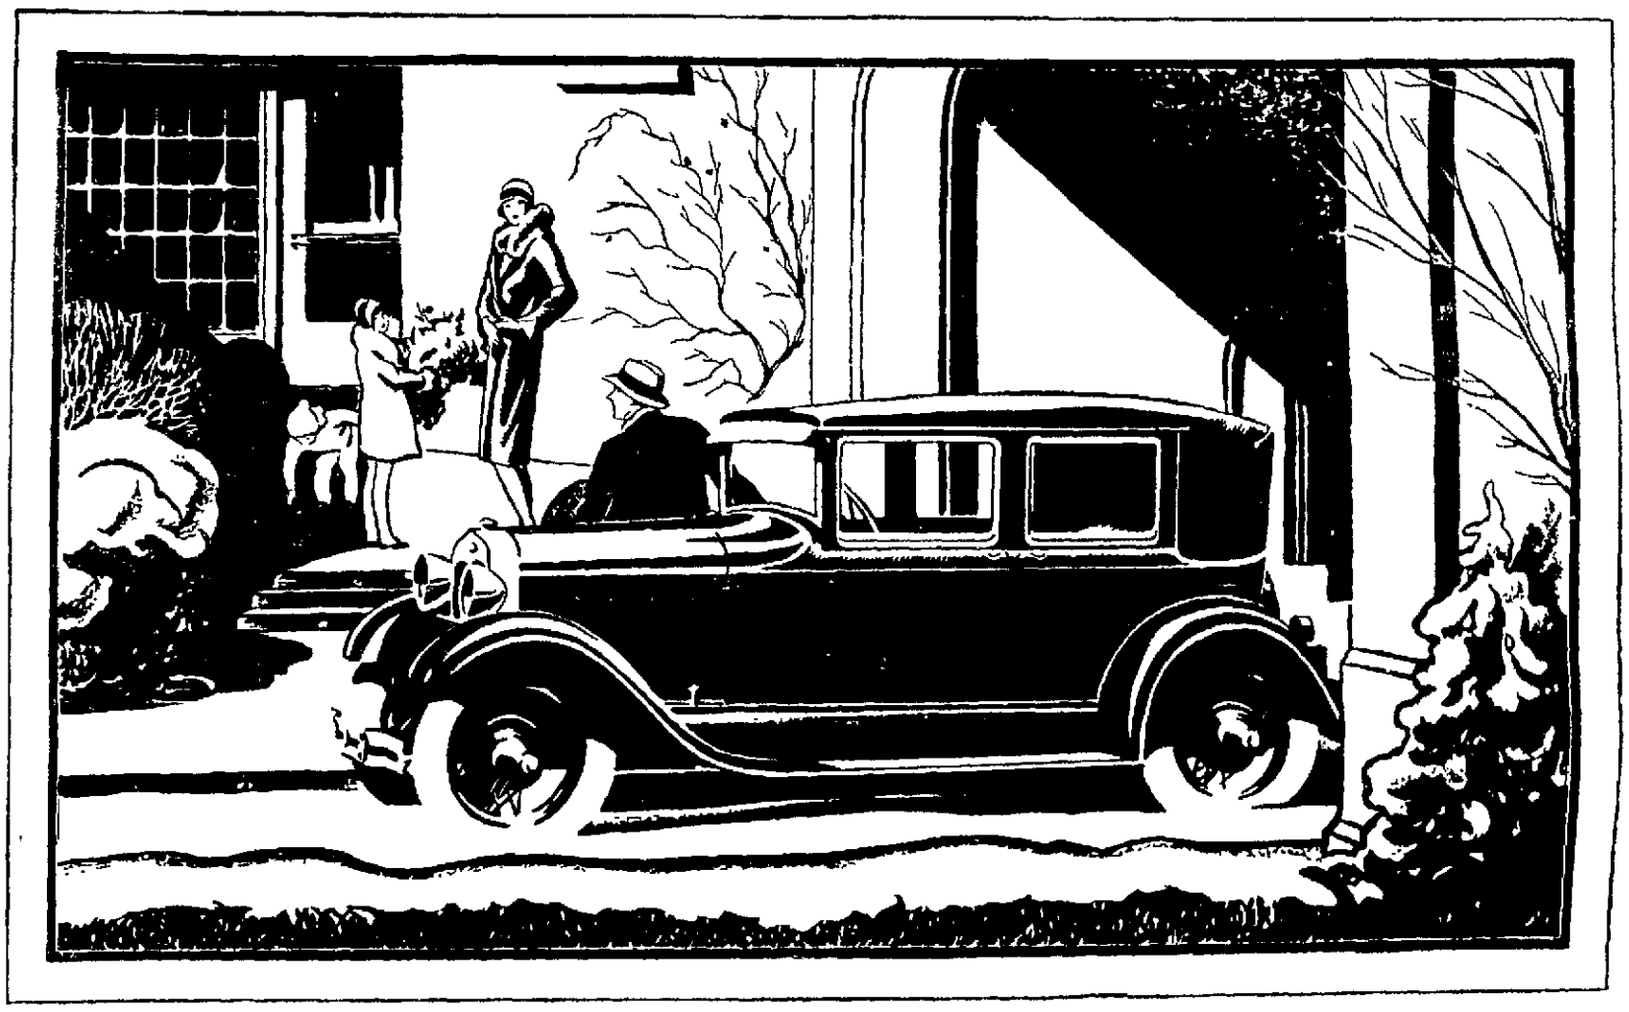
FRESH AND RELAXED AT THE JOURNEY'S END



ONE of the fine things about driving the new Ford is the way it takes you over the miles without fuss or fatigue.

Mentally you are at ease because you are sure of the mechanical performance of the car No matter how long the trip, or rough or devious the roadway, you know it will bring you safely, quickly to the journey's end.

Through thickest traffic, up steepest hills, along the open road, you will drive with security and confidence because the new Ford is so alert and capable and so easy to operate and control.

Ease of control adds to comfort of driving

The steering wheel answers to the touch of a finger Gears shift smoothly and silently. Brakes take hold quickly and firmly even on slippery pavements

Unusual acceleration, speed and power are especially appreciated in emergencies A space little longer than the car itself is all you need for parking.

These features simplify the mechanics of driving and, together with reliability, add a great deal to the mental comfort of motoring.

Physically, too, you will feel fresh and relaxed in the new Ford because it is such a roomy, easy-riding car.

The restfully tilted seats are made generously wide and are deeply cushioned, with coil springs of straight and hour-glass type. The backs are carefully designed to conform to the curves of the body.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the new Ford is found in its riding comfort. Somehow it seems to just glide along, as if every road were a good road. The rough spots are there, just as they have always been, but you do not feel them. It is almost as if a giant hand had smoothed the way before you. Even bad stretches may be taken at a reasonably fast pace without hard jolts or bumps or the exaggerated bouncing which is the cause of most motoring fatigue.

One reason, of course, is the use of four Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers—two in the front and two in the rear.

Of even greater importance, however, are the low center of gravity, the carefully planned balance of the car, and the many advantages of the transverse or crosswise springs.

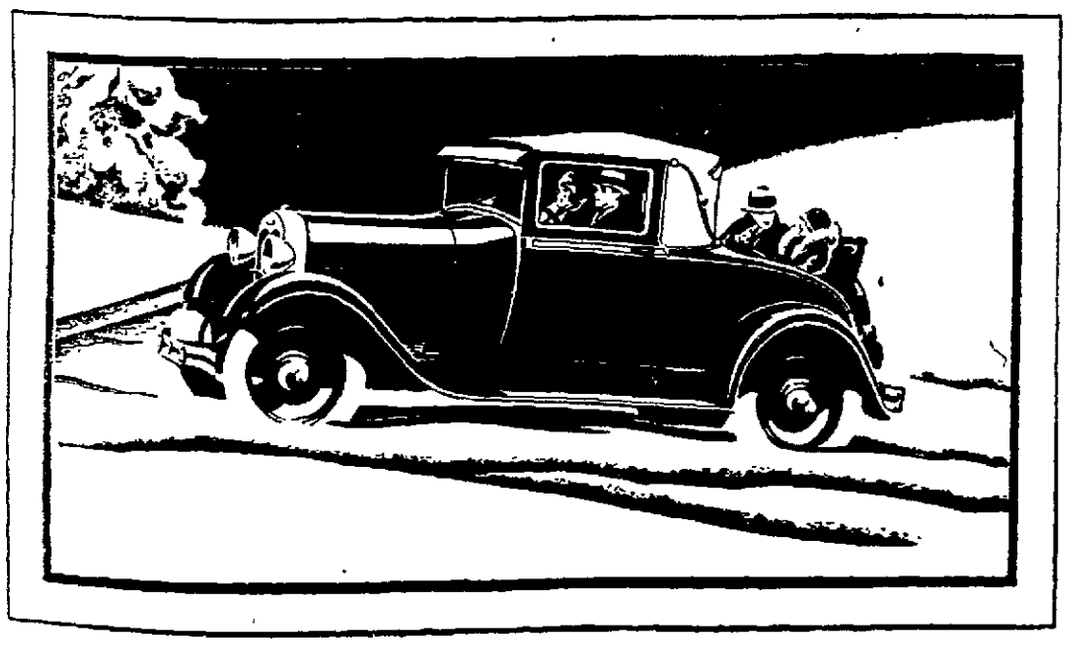
The Fordor Sedan is a particularly good family car not only because of its comfort, safety and beauty, but also because of its low first cost and low cost of operation and up-keep. Finished in a choice of colors—an unusual feature in a low-price car.

Special Ford springs soften force of road impacts

These springs rest on their flexible ends with the heavy center part uppermost. Thus the very weight of the springs receives the benefit of spring action instead of hanging below as dead weight and increasing the hammer-like blows of road impacts.

Another element in decreasing unsprung weight (the weight carried below the flexible ends of the springs) is the construction of the front axle and rear axle housing. Through the use of fine steel and electric welding, they are made of exceptional strength, yet kept comparatively light in weight.

All of these factors combine to reduce or absorb the force of every unevenness in the road before it reaches the frame, chassis and body of the car. This means more comfort for you personally and also contributes to better performance and longer life for every mechanical part.



Another feature of the new Ford is the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield. This is so made that the glass will not shatter or fly under the hardest impact. It is an important safety factor in these days of heavy traffic.

TO MIAMI NEXT WEEK

Return from 18,000-Mile Tour Remarkable for Its Simplicity

WASHINGTON, Jan 7—Herbert Hoover hung out the presidential elect's shingle today at the May flower hotel

In the capital for the first time since his election two months ago Hoover's first business was a rched uled White House call to discuss with President Coolidge the details of his Latin American good will tour He planned next to dive into the myriad problems preliminary to setting up his own administration in March

Besides meeting with members of the capital's committee on inaugural arrangements Hoover will confer with congressional leaders today and tomorrow on the legislative situation, particularly with reference to agricultural relief—the problem with which he must deal first following his inauguration

Line Divides Offices

Although Hoover makes history by establishing himself in the capital before the end of his predecessor's term, it is clearly understood in congressional circles that the president elect will scrupulously refrain from any act which might be construed as an encroachment upon President Coolidge's administration His temporary office only five blocks from the White House, the line which divides the two locations in the congressional discussion is as sharp as clear cut as if the president elect were still in the Amazon country

Hoover's return yesterday from his 18,000-mile neighborhood visit was remarkable for its simplicity In contrast with the throng of 70,000 which assailed Dedication in Buenos Aires two weeks ago the homecoming at Union station here was almost exclusively a family affair About 50 persons including Republican Chairman Hubert Work and Hoover's personal office staff greeted him as he stepped from the train He motored directly to his 8 st home to live quietly in his own home here for the first time since his election In the evening he greeted neighbors and friends in his study

Physically, too, you will feel fresh and relaxed in the new Ford because it is such a roomy, easy-riding car.

The restfully tilted seats are made generously wide and are deeply cushioned, with coil springs of straight and hour-glass type. The backs are carefully designed to conform to the curves of the body.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the new Ford is found in its riding comfort. Somehow it seems to just glide along, as if every road were a good road. The rough spots are there, just as they have always been, but you do not feel them. It is almost as if a giant hand had smoothed the way before you. Even bad stretches may be taken at a reasonably fast pace without hard jolts or bumps or the exaggerated bouncing which is the cause of most motoring fatigue.

One reason, of course, is the use of four Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers—two in the front and two in the rear.

Of even greater importance, however, are the low center of gravity, the carefully planned balance of the car, and the many advantages of the transverse or crosswise springs.

The Fordor Sedan is a particularly good family car not only because of its comfort, safety and beauty, but also because of its low first cost and low cost of operation and up-keep. Finished in a choice of colors—an unusual feature in a low price car

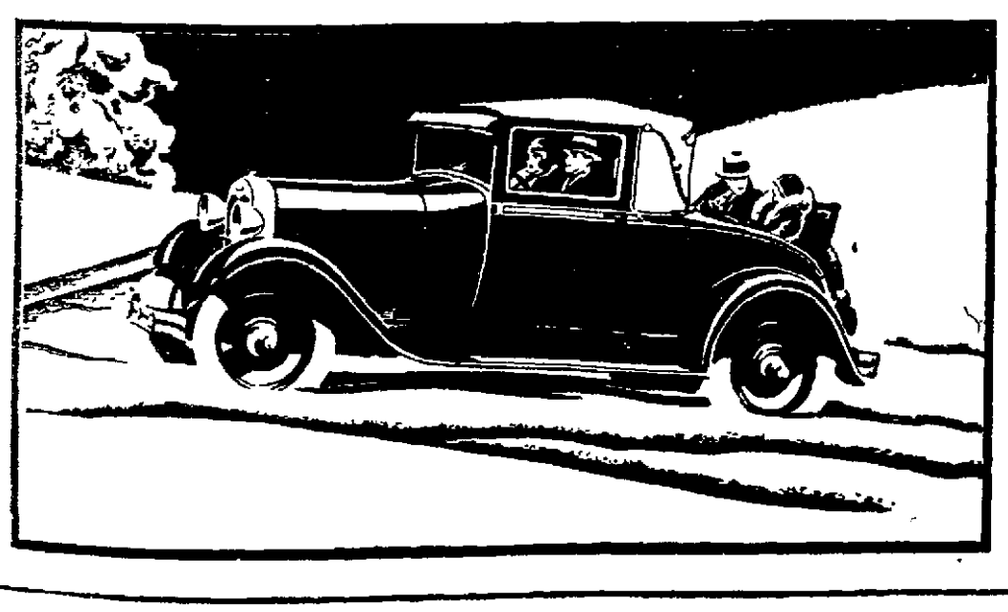
These springs rest on their flexible ends with the heavy center part uppermost. Thus the very weight of the springs receives the benefit of spring action instead of hanging below as dead weight and increasing the hammer-like blows of road impacts.

Another element in decreasing unsprung weight (the weight carried below the flexible ends of the springs) is the construction of the front axle and rear axle housing. Through the use of fine steel and electric welding, they are made of exceptional strength, yet kept comparatively light in weight.

All of these factors combine to reduce or absorb the force of every unevenness in the road before it reaches the frame, chassis and body of the car. This means more comfort for you personally and also contributes to better performance and longer life for every mechanical part.



Another feature of the new Ford is the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield. This is so made that the glass will not shatter or fly under the hardest impact. It is an important safety factor in these days of heavy traffic.

A Plea and a Warning.

The final plea of Governor A. V. Donahey to the people of the state of Ohio is that home rule be restored to the state and to all its political subdivisions. "In the subdivisions," the governor says, "there has been a slow, but steady, encroachment in violation of this principle. It is a malignant growth that saps the vitality of the township, municipality, the county and the state.

"In most of the laws now enacted, the will of the people is restricted. The state enacts laws giving subsidies to the subdivisions if certain restrictions are complied with. The federal government does the same with respect to the sovereign states.

"There should be absolute home rule in matters of taxation and in voting bond issues, but subject to the control of actual majorities resident in the district concerned, and not by majorities voting on the question."

The governor has in mind such subsidies as the federal government grants to states for road construction and such as the state grants to counties for roads or to school districts for educational purposes, in all of which cases the strong political divisions are made to assist in bearing the burdens of the weak. Speaking of the millions of dollars granted by the state annually by way of aid to weak school districts, the governor says:

"That is a growth that has arisen by reason of the unequal division of property values on the tax duplicates between school districts. The constitution implies equal educational opportunities for all children. So long as that obligation is imposed on the state, it must be met.

"But generally speaking, school districts should be permitted to spend their money for what they please; and this goes for townships, municipalities and for the state.

"Taxes collected in Cuyahoga county go to eighty-seven other counties in amounts out of all proportion to the taxable wealth in them.

"So does the tax money collected by the federal government go to the other, poorer states. It all comes from passing laws granting subsidies, with restrictions tied to the tails of the laws."

Governor Donahey very truthfully says that all legislators go to Columbus with ideas for more legislation and none with a plan for repealing existing laws, while what the state as a unit of government really needs is less law than it has and more honest enforcement of those worthy of being retained in the statute books.

While government has only a few simple purposes—"to protect and preserve the health, peace and safety of the people"—there is practically no limit to the regulatory laws an ambitious legislator may conceive as possible ways to this end.

"Some time—and that every soon—a brake must be placed on this tendency," the governor warns. "Some time, government must be told how far it can go in interfering with the individual.

"At present, there is the tendency to put this burden on the backs of the people without their consent. It is easy to enact laws, hard to repeal them." This will go on until the burden becomes unbearable, and the people rebel. "It will have to get worse before it gets better," the governor says. "But when the people do arise and put a stop to it, they will make changes that go too far in the other direction," changes that are too radical. "As it is now, legally imposed annoyances and red tape are becoming unbearable. The most honorable citizens are penalized because of the whims and shortcomings of others."

Speaking of sentences for certain crimes which the statutes made mandatory on the part of courts, the governor tells of pardoning a man sentenced to four years in the penitentiary for stealing two chickens because a special law imposed a penalty of two years for each chicken. "Of course," the governor continues, "there should be specific sentences for major crimes but there should be indeterminate sentences for minor infractions of the law.

"Think of the governor of Ohio being compelled, out of honesty, decency and justice, to reach into Star county and pardon 500 men from the Canton workhouse who are imprisoned because they can not pay fines imposed for liquor law violations!

"Think of the governor being compelled to either pardon them or let them rot in jail, in some cases for eight years or six months more than the average time served in the penitentiary for murder, all because a legislator had a law passed that forbade a judge from suspending any part of a liquor law sentence, or remitting any part of a fine."

We would not be taken as holding out that the judgment of Governor Donahey must be accepted as final, nor do we believe that he would have us attribute to him the accumulated wisdom of the ages, but we do say that one who has had experience as a township official, as clerk of a board of county commissioners, as a county auditor, as a member of a state constitutional convention, as an auditor of state for eight years and as governor for six—three consecutive terms as governor of Ohio being a record attained by him only—is in position to speak advisedly to the people of the state in which he has thus served. And we hold that the views of one who has had such an experience should be given the respectful attention and serious consideration of the people of our commonwealth and be accepted as of high worth.

About all that has been established thus far is that those who entered nine local school-houses within two weeks weren't seeking educations.

On the last westward trip of the Cunarder, Athonia, there was a chief steward, an assistant chief steward, a dining-room captain and twenty-five stewards to wait on the lone first-class passenger, a Scotchman. How he must have suffered over the waste of help!

Thirty-four New York speakeasies were raided and closed in one night last week, which has been construed by some as a showing-up of his predecessor by the newly-appointed police commissioner. At this distance it looks as though it might be also something of a showing-up of the city's touring mayor.

We do not wish to appear unduly suspicious, but we can not help wondering whether the four members of the lower house of congress fishing in Panaman waters really saw a fifteen-foot boa constrictor swimming in the canal or only thought they did.

Snow and gales have swept southern Europe. Five hundred are homeless in Rome and many in Florence, both the Tiber and the Arno being far over their banks. Coming right down to brass tacks, we are beginning to believe that the only safe winter resort is right here in the heart of the garden spot of the world.

Vagrant Verse.

WE SAY THE YEAR IS DONE.

We pause and sigh and say, "The year is done.
The year was old. And now the year is new.
The old grass withers on a thousand hills.
The old fires die."

And what is that of thee?
Thou art thyself the flame. Shall it be quenched
By any blowing of this little wind
That men call time?

There is another wind.
If this light fail, there is another light.
Man may snuff out a candle, but not a star.
He may go plucking apples, but not suns.
He may cast down a pilgrim from a shrine,
Never from beauty's altar.

The past things are not past.
The reapen field
Awaits another spring, another plough.
Thou are the field, older than earth and time,
The plough is in the steady hand of God.

And when the day of gathering shall come
And the bright scythe shall mow thy harvest down
It shall be rich and fragrant in the sun
Because of old past things.

We sigh and say,
"The year is done. The year is past and dead."
Nay, rather, all the old years born again.
Renewed and quickened to a fresh delight.
To heavenlier song and whiter dreams.

"SHUCKS!! WHO'S BEEN SPOILING MY FIREWORKS?"

Danger of Acid in Blood.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

As I write I am on a train going to Washington. The dining car steward just showed me a book on hygiene, written in 1895. While waiting for my meal, I read a few pages of what might be regarded as an obsolete work.

As a matter of fact, I was a bit surprised to observe how much was known sixty years ago. Perhaps I had better say I was reminded of what we commonly forget. We have made wonderful progress in finding out the reasons for things, but the bare facts relating to health were pretty well understood a generation or two ago.

The chapter on sunlight was a sensible outline of the value of sunslight and health. Our grandmothers or great-grandmothers had never heard of germs, but they did know that exposing the bedding and the milk pans to the sunlight did something that was positively beneficial "Sunning" things was the practice then, as it is today.

During the past several years there has been a growing conviction that the formation of acid in the system is an important factor in disease production. The blood is normally neutral or very slightly alkaline in its reaction. If anything causes it to become acid, there is trouble.

Who would think of sunlight as one of the agents to overcome or to prevent acidity? I doubt if Dr. Draper or any writer for half a century after him, ever thought of sunlight in that connection.

Here is an interesting statement which I read in a new book, just off the English press:

"That juices of fruit and vegetables —by virtue of their vitamins, probably also of their organic acids—and sunlight are the great 'balancers' against excess of acid or alkali in the body is suggested not only by modern discoveries of their effects on the organism, but also by the benefit that accrues from their use in the treatment of diseased conditions."

To understand fully the significance of this statement, you must be reminded that fruit acids do not go through the system as acids. They are changed by the chemistry of the body into alkaline substances.

These particular acids, then, and the sunlight, balance the diet and guard the system against excessive acidity. They help to make us healthy and long-lived.

I can not do better than to quote again from the new book. Dr. Draper, who wrote the old book I mentioned, did not know just how valuable sunlight was and what it did, but he knew its importance to health. Here is what the new English book says about this:

"The sun is the vital factor for existence. It not only supplies light, heat, and vital energy to the body, but is directly responsible for all our food through the agency of the green plant. Moreover, there is good reason to suppose that it becomes stored in the body; and that its radiations permeate every tissue, and in ways which are becoming more clear, encourages growth and prevents and neutralizes metabolic and other poisons, particularly that common tendency in disease, excessive acid formation."

We should not fail to make use of sunlight. We should use it to get well from disease.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

I. M. Q—What will help neuritis. I have taken medicine to no avail?

A—First of all try to locate the source of infection causing the trouble. Baking, electricity, baths, diet and medication all have value as treatment depending upon the cause in each case.

T. L. Q—Where would one find a specialist skilled in the removal of superfluous hair?

A—Inquire at one of the hospitals in your vicinity where they will be glad to advise you along these lines.

H. H. Q—I am a boy of fourteen, afflicted with canker sores. What can be done and what causes the trouble?

A—Due to acidity in the system. Correct your diet and keep the system clear.

A. R. Q—What treatment will help hay fever—I have bronchial trouble I have been doctoring to no avail.

A—Be sure there is no obstruction or catarrhal condition which may be causing the trouble. There are serums which have been helpful—why not have your doctor prescribe for you?—Copyright, 1929, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medicinal, hygienic and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Where the subject of a letter is such that it can not be published in this column, Dr. Copeland, will when the question is a proper one, write you personally if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed. Editorial Opinion.

HABITUAL CRIMINALS.

The imposition of a life sentence upon Mrs. Etta Miller, grandmother and small-scale bootlegger, of Lansing, Michigan, has aroused a storm of comment, centering around the habitual criminal law of the state of Michigan. It is believed by many that the conviction of this old woman for her fourth offense—the delivery of two pints of whisky—is a distortion of justice, and that it proves the unsoundness of the law, which, admittedly, is of an experimental character.

Unfortunately there has been much unreasoned comment on this incident, which presents a twisted picture of the true situation. It may be granted that in the case of Mrs. Miller the penalty is wholly out of proportion to the offense. But this can not properly be made a condemnation of legislation directed against habitual criminals who have been found guilty of major crimes. Rather, it is a sad commentary on the results of a hard-boiled attempt to enforce a well-night unenforceable law, namely, that prohibiting the sale of spirits.

The real object lesson of this unhappy case is in the definition of a felony at law. That a fourth offense against the law prohibiting murder, or arson, or burglary, should merit severe punishment is generally accepted. But that trivial offenses against the prohibition law, committed by a pawn of some well-protected bootleg king, are in the class of felonies, is wholly untenable. If the Ohio legislature concludes to set up a habitual criminal law—and there is much to be said for it—attention should be directed especially to a just definition of a felony for purposes of the habitual criminal law.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

MONCADA TO THE UNITED STATES.

Americans should not overlook this passage in the inaugural address of General Moncada upon assuming the presidency of Nicaragua: "In the same manner we comply only with our duty in giving thanks to the people of the United States, their government's electoral commission headed by General Frank McCoy, as well as to Admiral Sellers, General Dogan Feland and the Nicaraguan national guard for having conducted the election in the most honorable manner that could possibly be conceived."

Perhaps we should not use the word "unique" in describing this tribute to the fairness, honesty, patience and good judgment of the United States offered by the head of a nation that is just emerging from a period during which it was voluntarily under the control of the Washington government. For the people of Cuba have shown lively appreciation of similar friendly and neighborly service rendered to them when they have needed a helping hand. But we doubt whether any other nation and government has been the recipient of a similar expression of appreciation and thanks.

The words uttered by President Moncada may very well send a glow of pleasure through the republic. They come from a statesman of experience and ability. They are the sort of recognition most welcome to the United States, and they are doubly pleasant to hear at this time, because they are a complete reply to those critics, domestic and foreign, who for months have been assailing the Nicaraguan policy of the United States, sneering at it and misinterpreting its aims; and who have been grossly slandering America at every turn, in many cases trying their best to stir up distrust against us in Central and South America. Moncada's statement is a most pleasant vindication of this nation and all it has done in Nicaragua.—Detroit Free Press.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. MCINTYRE.

New York, Jan. 7 — Diary of a modern Pepys: Up to say good-bye to Frazier and Emma Hunt against their voyaging to London again to live for a time and to call on Gene Fowler, the editor. And a gentleman to whom I spoke harshly for brushing me with his car sneered: "Too bad about you, you poor sap."

So to labour a while and then away to join a merry gathering and Senator Pat Harrison there telling the most amusing southern yarns I ever heard. And there were three I determined to remember and repeated them over and over, but an hour later they were gone.

To dinner with my wife and Frank Case, noticing a bulge in my pocket, inquired the cause and it was a slim volume called "Love," by William Lyon Phelps, and somehow I blushed like a schoolboy. Talked to Bert Lytle, whom I never met, and a personable fellow he is, too.

The rich and blase young bloods in eternal quest of the super kick are now forming expeditions to dash to the North pole. The fad was popularized by the polar pilgrimage of young Putnam, the publisher's son, and is the last word in expensive excitement chasing. The upkeep of a string of polo ponies or a yacht are cheap in comparison. Big sporting goods establishments have thrown open huge departments specializing in the outfitting of such journeys. Judging from the paraphernalia, the hardships must be terrible—sometimes we imagine the coffee in the thermos bottle might be actually tepid.

There is the story of a stripling who dropped around to be outfitted for the Far North. He desired something in a great coat with a hood, perhaps to match his slim mustache. And he wanted it lined with silk oilskin. The salesman insisted the best thermal qualities were preserved by wearing the fur, instead of oilskin next to the flesh. "Science has found," he said, "that with fur inside, the body is better able to withstand terrible cold." When that percolated, the young adventurer gave way to a fit of laughter, and when the clerk inquired the why of the merriment, he replied: "What a boob the buffalo is!"

In large railroad centers a school of instruction for Pullman porters is maintained. They are taught to manipulate the berth, make beds, hang up the little hammocks and some even learn to open train windows. An old-time Pullman porter tells me he tries to give every "graduate" the most profitable instruction of all. And that is never to accept trifling sums right after performing some service. He advises them to refuse politely with: "O, never mind, thank you, sir. Just wait until the end of the trip." He says the average traveler calls a porter four times on a day's trip. Tipping piecemeal the total would be forty cents. In refusing this the reward is likely to be a dollar.

Ignorance.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Who are the ignorant? An answer to this requires a preliminary answer to another question, viz: What is ignorance? But as soon as this second question is put we have a flash that nobody is ignorant, except in a relative sense. There is no absolute standard of ignorance or of knowledge.

One of the paradoxical results of the swift advance of modern science is that ignorance is specialized along with knowledge. A man may be at the same time learned and ignorant. Less than a century ago Alexander von Humboldt was able to write a book called "Cosmos," in which the whole field of human knowledge was fairly covered by one man's information; but no single person could write a "Cosmos" today. The field has expanded beyond the limits of the individual mind. Knowledge is now pushed by "mass production."

Not only is ignorance relative, but it also differs in kind. Like Einstein's relativity, there is a general ignorance and a specialized ignorance. The specialized ignorance is that of the learned, who know only their own lines. If you attend a great meeting of scientific men, like that of the American association, you will be struck by the profound depths of ignorance which lie like deep, dark swamp holes between tufted islets of firm ground which are ablaze with the sunshine and flowers of localized research.

Each isle is occupied by its group of learned men who are ignorant of the equally important learning of the occupants of other isles. When they undertake to step from one oasis to another they are apt to sink as deeply into the tarns of ignorance as does the unspecialized public in its stumbling after new knowledge. Each group has its own special language, which grows and spreads with the rapidity of Jonah's gourd, or the next edition of the dictionary or encyclopedia.

It is not lack of acquaintance with these specialties of knowledge that constitutes the kind of ignorance which every one should avoid. It is general ignorance which lames and sometimes disgraces, and the cure or prevention of which is the true business of free education.

In the fields of special research, and particularly of theorization, what is apparent knowledge today is apt to be transmuted or else altogether discarded tomorrow. It is an unsolved problem how to treat this for popular consumption so that the real nature of the product shall be apparent and unmistakable. There have been some injurious examples lately of hasty, over-confident, enthusiastic exploitation of theories touching the very foundations of science, which theories have been proclaimed as established laws of nature solely on the basis of their "successes." But these "successesses" covered very brief periods, of a few years only, and were of a special and limited nature growing out of the theories themselves. It is no wonder that in such cases the back track or a new track has had to be taken.

Do such theories represent knowledge or ignorance? What they really are is hypotheses, and the distinction ought to be maintained that a hypothesis is only a provisional theory or a theory of condition which is not to be taken for a law of nature, but only as a working plan, or supposition, which may aid in the discovery of a real law, a settled theory, like Newton's law of gravitation.

Remember, however, that Newton did not pretend to have discovered the cause of gravitation; he only said that it acted like an attraction. Newton was not ashamed of his ignorance, for he knew that it enveloped mankind on all sides like the heavens. He would only have been ashamed if he had not tried to find here and there a star of knowledge glittering in the void.—Copyright, 1929, International Feature Service, Inc.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

In the old days—perhaps even yet—Sunday-school teachers used to be careful to tell their pupils that "reputation is what people think you are; character is what you are." While the definitions are good and the emphasis proper, perhaps there has been a tendency to overlook the importance of reputation. Notwithstanding the fact that character is the main goal of every thoughtful, well-ordered life, no young man can afford to neglect for a moment the building of a reputation. Money is loaned on reputation. Opportunities follow reputation. The powerful and dangerous thing about reputation is that it is lasting. Once get a name for being poor pay, inefficient, lazy, not quite straight, disloyal, and it takes years to change that reputation to something better.

Many people have been going through a period of new resolutions. They are always in the forefront of our thinking in the early days of a new year. Those wisest in the way of life make the fewest resolutions. Or rather it might be said they make but one. They resolve to meet each situation, however difficult, with the calm determination to make the best possible adjustment to that situation. They resolve to give an honest effort—to do as well as they know how. That's enough.

Some years ago a fund was set up to be used to educate young Russians who were obliged to leave their native country and had no means to pursue their education. One hundred and thirty-three of these young people were in American schools in the college year of 1927-28. It is very interesting to note that not one failed in his work, and that from a quarter to a third of them were students of the first rank. These young men, different in many ways from Americans, coming from a far country, were able to compete in the finest way with Americans in our universities.

Fortunately for civilization, the best minds are scattered over the earth. Some famous opinions to the contrary, the fact is still and always will be evident that no nationality, no race, has produced a monopoly on brains.

"Why do you insist on getting into this argument?"

"I've got to contribute my share of talk," said Senator Sorghum, "in order to avoid being overlooked. Statesmanship now requires publicity, same as any other line of activity."

A man at one of Dr. Cadman's Sunday afternoon meetings put the question: "Do you believe that Balaam's ass spoke?"

"Why not?" answered Dr. Cadman. "There are plenty of asses talking now."

The burglar turned pale; he realized from the trophies and pictures in the room that he and his pal had broken into the house of a famous pugilist.

"Let's clear out while we're safe," he whispered, terror-stricken.

"We're safe in this house," returned his pal contemptuously. "You know very well that guy never fights for less than a purse of half a million."

REV. D. E. MILLER OPENS PASTORATE

First Sermons Given Sunday at Local Nazarene Church

"Vision, an Experience," was the subject of the Rev. D. E. Miller's first sermon as pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, South State st, given at the church Sunday morning. The sermon theme was based on the life of Isaiah.

He portrayed the sixth chapter of Isaiah's vision of God and his conviction of the need of the world. Isaiah's vision of himself and his unworthiness and the vision of the world and Isaiah's mission in the world concluded the sermon.

In the evening, the Rev. Mr. Miller chose for his subject, "The Gospel." He stated that there was only one Gospel and that Christ commissioned his preachers to preach it. He pointed out the results of not obeying the word of God, and at the end of his sermon stated, "The Gospel is received with Divine Power, it is received by baptism of the Holy Spirit, and it is received in much assurance."

His evening sermon was taken from the first chapter of Romans, where Paul says: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto Salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first and also to the Greek," and from the first chapter of first Thessalonians, where Paul also says: "For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."

The attendance at the services was large. The Rev. Mr. Miller preached at the Canaan church, a small branch of the Nazarene church, yesterday afternoon.

Rev. Mr. Miller was pastor at Mt. Vernon prior to accepting the local pastorate.

375,000 Jars Vicks Now Produced Every 24 Hours

That the public has not forgotten the lesson of 1918 is indicated by its prompt response to the warning of health authorities to combat the flu by keeping free from colds.

The demand for Vicks VapoRub, the vaporizing salve which proved so valuable during the 1918 epidemic has already shattered by a wide margin all previous records

Although the capacity of the Vicks laboratories has been tripled since 1918, they are once more operating night shifts. The present output is more than 375,000 jars every 24 hours.

Mild though it is in comparison with 1918, this years epidemic has already affected more than a million persons, and it is apparently still increasing.—Adv.

Meditations of a Married Woman

BY HELEN ROWLAND

On Saxophone Dorade

THERE' nothing that my wrath so rilles
As these new, freakish Winter styles!
These bateau-necks excite my groans—
And show up all my collar bones!
And how I hate the drooping skirt,
That sweeps up all the dust and dirt!
These fit-quick bodices, I hate—
They make sixteen look forty-eight!
But ONE thing I hate worse, and that's
These silly, skin-tight Paris HATS!
I loathe the modes! I cannot bear 'em!
And yet—and yet, I KNOW I'll wear 'em!

THERE are two kinds of graceful modern dances—"UN" and "DIS!"

COUPLES LEAVING STATE FOR MARRIAGE LICENSES

SACRAMENTO, CAL. — Cupid, faced with California's three day marriage law, evidently threw up his hands in despair and used his darts for other purposes, declared L E Ross, chief of the state bureau of vital statistics

Since California passed a law making it necessary to file intention to wed three days before the marriage license was issued, weddings in the state have been reduced at the rate of 41 per day

Reno, Nevada, far-famed as a divorce center, and other bordering county seats in Arizona, Nevada and Oregon, have reaped the benefit of license fees, however, according to Ross.

Each of the huge steel doors of the new Bank of England vaults weighs 12 tons They are water-tight, and each requires two men with different keys to open it.

If I Were A Man | If I Were A Girl

I'D BE interested in things outside my business

I wouldn't bore people by talking shop all the time and I wouldn't dry up my brain by thinking of nothing but my work I'd read a lot and I'd go to the theater I'd be able to discuss books and plays with people, instead of moping in the corner, waiting for an opportunity to start talking about my business.

I'd watch other people and listen to them and find out what they did and thought.

I'd try to learn something of other businesses than my own by talking with men in various lines of work I'd widen my interests as much as possible, for the man who knows nothing but his own particular field is a pretty dry stick.

He is far from being a social asset, and he doesn't cut much ice where we girls are concerned

WOULDN'T be ashamed of being economical

If I were clever with my needle and knew how to make a smart hat or a modish frock out of a bit of felt or a wisp of silk I'd be proud of my skill instead of hiding it under a bushel.

If anyone complimented me on my dress I wouldn't say with a bored and affected air, "Yes, it is rather nice—and especially for the price. I picked it up at Madame So-and So's for a mere two hundred dollars"

And if anyone admired my hat, I wouldn't brush the remark aside with a casual: "Well, of course I didn't need it. But it was such a bargain—only $45—that I simply couldn't resist it" If I were a bargain hound who could scent a marked-down sale across the width of the city, I'd admit it freely and profit thereby.

Economy is no sin and skill with the hands no drawback in the eyes of the man looking for a thrifty mate.

How to Keep Love when excess fat might lose it

People who are over-fat lose in youth and beauty, health and vigor. What a pity. Excess fat is now easily controlled. You see that in every circle.

Some years ago science discovered a great cause of overweight. It lies in a gland which is under-active—a gland which largely controls nutrition. Fat is not lost to stay lost until that defect is corrected.

The modern method of treating obesity is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. They were perfected in a famous medical laboratory. People have used them for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. They have told the results to others, and year by year the use has spread.

Today you see the effects in every circle. Slender figures are the rule. Countless people who were over-fat now have normal weight. Women look younger, more attractive. Men have gained in vigor. One great reason is found in Marmola.

Each box of Marmola contains the formula, also the scientific reasons for results. You know what you are taking and why. No hard work, no starvation. Just be moderate. Then take four tablets daily until weight comes down to normal.

Try Marmola, because of what it has done for over 20 years for so many. The results will be a revelation to you. Do this for your own sake. Do it now

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

TELL EASY WAY TO FIGHT FLU

Health Authorities Say "Foolish to Take Needless Risks"...Urge Simple Precautions

Important to Remove Germs From Hands Often

WITH city after city throughout the country, reporting more cases of flu every day—as many as a million new ones in a week—health authorities are urging people to take every precaution against this dread ailment.

Always remember that hands may spread influenza, just as they carry and spread the germs of other serious diseases. No one can escape contact with germs, authorities say. Every time we handle money, use a public telephone, touch a car strap or doorknob, we are likely to pick up germs which some one's soiled hands have left for us. For this reason, health officials advise every one to take the simplest of precautions and remove germs from hands frequently.

Greater safety in an antiseptic toilet soap

Since the outbreak of the flu, countless new thousands of people have turned to the famous Lifebuoy Health Soap. As is well known, this popular toilet soap possesses an antiseptic, germ-removing lather.

It is not enough to wash hands once or twice daily. Lifebuoy should be used many times during the day, especially before eating, for, as pathologists point out, germs get into our systems principally by direct conveyance from hand to mouth. It is important, too, that this habit of frequently removing germs from hands be practiced not only now, but at all times—just as doctors themselves do to protect themselves and their patients.

Teachers in over 63,000 schools have taught children the Lifebuoy way to guard health. Now countless thousands of mothers are being urged to follow this splendid example.

Lifebuoy is obtainable in practically every store. Its cost is no greater than other toilet soaps, so you secure its extra protection free.

Other precautions urged are as follows: Keep out of crowds. Get plenty of sleep, fresh air, and nourishing food. Take plenty of exercise. Avoid exposure. And lastly, if you have the real flu, don't take "home remedies"—call a doctor.

Daphne

An Unusual Romance of Love and Sacrifice

BY HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER FIFTY NINE

ALONG the quiet Sunday streets Daphne walked, stopping to look in the shop windows, pausing to admire and notice prices—just as if she cared. There was a cross fox in a furrier's window, prettier than the one she wanted so badly last spring. A blue dress in a sport shop . . . Blue, her color, Ralph said . . . She had the money for it now, when the need for it had passed. A lot it mattered now whether she wore winter-before-last's coat, and last summers' hat.

"Thank heaven for work!" she thought, hurrying on toward the office. She could kill the long day there on Allan's papers. Maybe nothing on Allan's papers. Maybe she could finish . . . it would please Mr. Greely.

Mr. Greely was having his breakfast in bed. He liked leaning back against his pillows, balancing the morning papers against his bony knees, while he sipped the good, hot coffee the old butler brought him, and ate broiled herring swimming in melted butter. And besides, it put off the unpleasant moment of meeting Sister Anne. Sunday, without the excuse of the office, was long enough at best.

On this particular morning, the morning that Daphne was on her way to the office, he enjoyed his breakfast more than usual. But he did not read the papers. Instead, he reached for his wallet, which he kept in his vest on the chair beside him, and adjusting his glasses, read three letters with many chirps and clunks of secret satisfaction.

"Henry," he said, addressing the butler who was almost as old as he, "This is a great world, I'm telling you, and while I was never an admirer of the Wilsonian doctrine, there are times when watchful waiting is an interesting game . . . a very interesting game . . . hmm . . . bah!"

"Yes, sir," said Henry. More coffee, sir?"

"Hmm—"

So Henry poured it, and departed with the remains of the fish. The old man sipped his coffee, selected a large, very black cigar from the box beside his bed and puffed on it with immense satisfaction. The gentle summer wind stirred the curtains lightly, the sun made pools of ruby light on the red velvet carpet on the floor. A pleasant day, a restful day.

Well, he could afford to rest, he thought complacently. He had done all that there was to do. It was in the lap of the Gods now, and not much longer to wait. "We'll see," he mumbled, "we'll see!"

He fingered the three envelopes absent-mindedly, and a smile, half humorous, half wistful, touched his thin pale lips. The three letters were all in the same handwriting, all addresses to him. Two bore South American postmarks, and one, the oldest one, was postmarked San Francisco. He opened that one again and read it through.

It was very short, just a few pencilled lines, scrawled on a sheet torn from a loose-leaf pocket notebook.

"Dear Mr. Greely—

Will you see to it that the contents of my desk in McKevitt's office are destroyed. Everything, but particularly the contents of the small tin box. The keys are on the ring on top of the desk or somewhere around the office. I expected to go back and take care of everything myself. I know what you will think of me for quitting this way. You can not despise me any more than I despise myself. Still I know that you will do this for me. Forgive my asking it, there is no one else.

Allan"

There came a tapping at the door, and Mrs. Colby's high, cracked voice calling, "John! Are you coming to church?"

The old man grimaced and tucked the letters out of sight under the pillow.

The tapping began again. "John are you asleep?"

"If I was I'd be awake now!" he said grimly.

Mrs. Colby took that as an invitation to come in. "It's after 10," she said, rustling into the room, and automatically straightening a crooked etching near the door, "Look at that! Tut tut! That girl gets worse and worse, she knows how I dislike a carelessly dusty picture. I found rolls of dust under the davenport in the drawing room . . . rolls of it . . . look, John—that big"

Mr. Greely shut his eyes.

"John! Are you asleep?"

"How can I sleep? Why don't you go to church if you're going, and quit nagging me, Anne. I gave strict orders to Henry that I was not to be disturbed. I'm resting."

"You're not going to church?" Mrs. Colby's voice crackled with indignation. She began to pull on her gloves with nervous little rushes that threatened to part the seams of the immaculate white kid.

"No."

"Father Steele asked for you last week. It makes it very awkward for me, having to explain. Mrs. Redmond heard me, and said you must be feeling well—"

"Eh?"

"Yes she did. It was very humiliating for me. She said she noticed you always came when you were sick, and stayed away when you were well!"

He chuckled. "Nellie Redmond isn't as big a fool as she looks."

Mrs. Colby flushed angrily, "Yes, joke about sacred matters. Do! There'll come a time when you'll have plenty to explain, John Greely! And you needn't think any death-bed repentance is going to clear you, either! You're altogether too sure of yourself, and too sure everybody else is a fool! What do you think you are—God?"

Bang went the door, off went Sister Anne in a huff. He heard her small, angry feet tapping on the stairs, and presently the sound of the motor starting in the driveway. She was on her way . . .

The old man lay back on his pillows, a little tired. "Terrible woman," he mumbled, "fright!"

He thought over her last words, chuckling softly. Gradually the chuckle failed, a pucker appeared between his bushy brows. He reached for Allan's letter again . . . "Will you see to it that the contents of my desk in McKevitt's office are destroyed" . . . Allan had depended on him for that, and he, for reasons that seemed good and sufficient, had turned them over to Daphne Haines instead . . . juggling with Allan's future, deciding his fate for him . . . playing God!

Small beads of sweat dampened his forehead . . . he might at least have looked into it before he turned everything over to the girl . . . He reached for the telephone at his bedside . . .

"Number, please?" the operator asked.

For an instant he hesitated. Then he slammed up the receiver. "Hell's bells! I'll not back down now. I'll let 'er ride!"

And in the office, all unconscious of the struggle that was going on in Greely's mind, Daphne Haines made neat piles of Allan's most personal belongings, the contents of the little black tin box.

There were newspaper clippings in one pile. The things we keep are such a giveaway . . . but Allan's all pertained to another man. "Card Halfback on His Way to Recovery." "Cardinal Captain Demon on Offense." "McKeyitt for All American." Daphne laid them aside swiftly. She knew some of the most florid almost by heart. They were the same clippings she had once collected . . . stories of Ralph McKevitt, one-time Cardinal captain, the greatest halfback Stanford every knew.

There were pictures too . . Ralph with a football under his arm. Ralph shaking hands with the Coach, Ralph with the team, Ralph in action, tearing down the turf . . .

Daphne laid them face downward on the desk. They no longer thrilled her. She thought dispassionately, "I wasn't the only one who worshipped him. It's plain poor Allan did. He wasn't worth it . . . nobody is . . ."

Her young mouth was set in a hard, straight line. She took the small handful of papers and pictures that remained, and spread them before her on the desk.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

YESTERDAY morning when me and Jubilee woke up the first thing we thought of was Frank-horse being sold, and I wondered about my mother being willing to wear a fur coat bought with the money my father got for him. I suppose if he sold me she would take the money and buy her a pair of shoes.

I let Jubilee down by the rope and went down and done my work and all the time I was milking I kept looking around at the empty stall where Frank-Horse used to be. I was mighty lonesome till the bunch began to come, and then I sent a squirt of milk at Feeble and she ducked and it hit Youniss in the eye and Youniss said, "Oh Thomas Aristides!" and she said it so funny that all the bunch began copy-catting it. When the Lost Bag of Tripe rolled his eyes up at me and looked like a sunstruck toad-frog and said, "Oh, Thomas Aristides," I shot his face full of milk, and when he went to step backwards Hopper had put his crutch between the Lost Bag of Tripe's feet and he sot down so hard that it must have jarred the spine of his back. Then Feeble hollered "Pile on!" and when anyone in the bunch hollers that you have to do it; so they all piled onto the Lost Bag of Tripe except Youniss and Feeble. They were all in a squirming wiggling pile with the purps and Youniss and Feeble dancing around them, and the pail I had watered the cow from was standing on the floor near my right hand where I was sitting, and I reached for it and poured it on them and sot down so quick and went on milking that when they had got done gasping from the cold water and had got unscrambled they couldn't tell who done it. When they asked me I told them they must be mistaken, and when they showed me they were all wet I said it must be sweat, but I couldn't make them believe it, and they all went in the kitchen to get dry and were there when my aut washed me for Sunday school. They enjoyed it more than I did.

Today was a school day, and when we were going past the store on our ways to school there was a string across the window and a lot of valentines hanging onto it, so now I know that Valentine Day is coming and I have got to get more money some way. I am glad a fella don't have to give a girl anything on Washington's birthday or Fourth of July.

I guess that is the reason men get married to women, to keep from having to give them presents every time they turn around, and I don't blame them. I asked my mother if that was it, and she said she didn't know, but that is the way it works out. So I bet I am right.

Love's Awakening

THE HEART STORY OF A WOMAN'S AFFECTIONS

By ADELE GARRISON

Develops Paternal Jealousy

KATHERINE'S comment upon Lillian's feeling for her husband came back to me forcibly when within the hour Dicky and Harry Underwood drove into the farmyard. There was the look in her eyes, the lilt in her voice as she greeted him which a woman accords only to her best beloved.

The revelation was only a matter of tone and look, however. Outwardly her greeting of Harry, as mine of Dicky, was casual, while theirs was equally nonchalant, tinged with the nonsense so frequently investing the speech of both men.

But there was no mirth in either man's voice when after dinner they manoeuvred an opportunity to speak to me alone.

"What's this dope about the Brixton girl going to Marion's school?" Harry demanded. "I didn't say much to Lil about it, for I didn't want to upset her, but it doesn't look good to me a little bit."

"Looks like a put-up job," Dicky said. "I wonder you stood for it."

There was in his voice, or so I fancied, the eternal conjugal tendency to blame any untoward happening on the other half of the matrimonial partnership. I testified resentfully, though I kept my voice calm.

A Devious Scheme

"I don't know what we could have done about it." I said, "although Katherine and I share your opinion that either Mr. Brixton or Mr. Owen—probably both—found out what school Marion was attending and then entered Carolyn there. But it is almost impossible to change Marion's school now, and if you had seen Helena Brixton and her children you would have acquitted them of any underhand dealing. They are as unsuspecting as Lillian is. Queerly enough she hasn't thought of any possible scheming in that direction on Sam Brixton's part—and Carolyn is the dearest little trick imaginable. She would be an ideal friend for Marion."

"As ideal as her brother," Harry Underwood drawled, and I suddenly found myself ranged definitely on Ronald Brixton's side as I heard the slighting note in the voice of Marion's stepfather. But there was no resentment for him in my heart. I knew, that, never having had a child of his own, he was experiencing paternal jealousy of Marion's first admirer.

"She couldn't be better," I retorted warmly. "Both Ronald and Carolyn are wonderful—well bred, clean cut, charming—exactly the types that any mother might to be overjoyed to have as companions for her young people."

Paternal Jealousy

"That's all very well," Dicky struck in. "We'll concede that you can see the pin feathers sprouting on their shoulders. But that doesn't alter the fact that Marion will be thrown into intimate contact with the whole Brixton family. Harry tells me that there is an arrangement already for Marion to take in a football game and dance with the boy, and if the girl is her roommate, can't you see—"

"I see perfectly," I returned, "and I am as worried over the possibilities of Samuel Brixton's taking advantage of this close association as you possibly can be. But what can be done? We have only conjectures to work on, anyway. There isn't the slightest proof, only our own hunches, that Samuel Brixton means any mischief. And it's a certainty that his wife and children are innocent of any scheming. All we can do is to keep watch of Samuel Brixton's activities and those of his half-brother."

"You are eminently correct," Lady Fair," Mr. Underwood said, "and the first requisite of success for that espionage is that they do not know me or the Dicky-bird. They'll all be down at the school tomorrow, Lil said, so we'll just change our plans pronto. We'd planned to have the old quartet escort the kid down to school, but now the Dicky-bird and I shall be conspicuous for our absence. You and Lil can manage the boat, can't you?"

This Week's Prize for Simplified Baking

Goes to ORANGE WASHINGTON PIE

Cake Mixing Time Less Than 5 Minutes!

Mrs. Harold Duke, (right) explains to Mrs. George Manning the real secret of her prize-winning cake—"Kitchen-tested" flour!

Another "Kitchen-tested" Recipe

It is called "Orange Washington Pie," but it's really a cake. Yet—astonishingly simplified. Of 176 women baking it, only 3 were disappointed. And they blamed oven temperatures, chiefly, for their failures.

By the development of an utterly new type of flour—Gold Medal "Kitchen-tested" Flour—baking has been simplified amazingly for housewives. And the cause of most baking disappointments banished.

"Kitchen-tested" means that every batch of this flour has been tested in an oven just like yours, before it goes to you. Tested for uniformity of result with home recipes.

That means Gold Medal Flour always acts the same way EVERY TIME with your recipes.

Ask your grocer for GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour. For perfect results, be sure and get that brand of flour before you try this recipe.

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood

BY DOROTHY HERZOG
Marion Star Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD —A contagious languor permeates the film village. A natural reaction from the excitement of the previous week and more specifically the intense merriment of last eve.

And so, 'tis no more than logical that ye correspondent conduct a lightning tour through 1928 before it is pushed into the realm of memory by the fury of the present.

It was a sad New Year's last year for Lina Basquette. Her husband Sam Warner, had only recently passed on. Lina, however, being young, battled through to a certain mental serenity. And so met Pev Marely, a nice looking cameraman. Just recently she announced her engagement to him, and on January 7, they will be married.

Bebe Daniels was reckoned to be terribly fond of Jack Pickford and many believed they would be married. Only recently, however. Bebe and Jack split, and this split has proven to be decisive. Today Bebe together with her friend Mildred Lowe—who is getting a divorce from her husband—are frequently seen with Ben Lyon and "Skeets" Gallagher. It was some months ago, incidentally that Ben and Marilyn Miller came to a friendly parting of the ways.

Last year Lupe Velez was an unknown screen quantity. This year she rates with the unknown screen quality.

Dolores Del Rio, another import from Mexico, was riding the wave of popularity as 1928 bowled onto the calendar. Today Dolores faces a crisis in her film career. Her next picture, it is prognosticated by those who know their box office, tells the tale—whether she remains a star or gradually sinks into the obscurity from which Edwin Carewe and his publicity representatives lifted her. Last year, too, Dolores was happily married to Jaime Del Rio, as fine a lad as ever lived. In the autumn of '28 Jaime and Dolores separated. Jaime discovered he was in the way. He went to Europe. He died in Germany a short time ago—alone, and calling for his wife. She had just returned to Hollywood.

Gloria Swanson has managed to hold her own as a stellar figure during the most difficult year 1928, Constance Talmadge has become more a name than a screen actuality. William Haines soared to stardom. Marion Davies enjoyed her most successful screen year and 1929 dawns to see her the outdoes not take any too kindly to the microphone.

NORMA TALMADGE

Sue Carol has risen from the nowhere to the silver sheet somewhere. It is also believed by friends and acquaintances that Sue and young Nick Stewart may lockstep to the altar in the not distant future. Today sees them rooting for the University of California at the football game being played in Pasaden's Rose Bowl 'twixt this team and Georgia Tech.

Jack Gilbert survived a wobbly year and only a few weeks ago resigned with M. G. M. at a stupendous salary. Perhaps this year will see him and Greta Garbo married. Last year Greta had not decided to break with Maurice Stiller, the Swedish director who "discovered" her. He passed on recently.

This year sees the motion picture faced with the talky menace. It sees the producers hurriedly preparing to cope with the new order. It sees the old silent order slinking out and leaving many players scared of their future, not to mention their present.

The year 1929 will be the most interesting and the most revolutionary one the cinema has yet known.

Books Lure Movie Stars as Method of Developing Voice for Talking Films

Reading-Aloud Clubs Formed by Hollywood Favorites as Vocal Performers Invade Motion Picture Colony; Criticism Aids Actors To Perfect Pronunciation

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. Jan. 7 —It looks as if the talking films would create a race of super savants.

Men and women who have long basked in the sunshine of motion picture magazines have suddenly turned to literature as a haven from the storming vocal performers who are dashing their trained voices against the gates of filmdoms citadels.

They have organized against the invasion into reading-aloud clubs Stars and starlets have decided that it is necessary to practice the vocal organs and at the same time dust the cobwebs from the old bean.

Reading aloud does the double duty.

It's just like a family affair to see a group of stars, in idle moments, sitting around reading aloud from heavy tomes. There is criticism as to the proper pronunciation of words and a gag man, usual a pundit, explains any difficult passages. The widely-known Noah Webster presides at all the group readings. The pictures-to-be must be properly enunciated for the 'mike' is a respector of no performer.

Super Savants

Scholars predict that these reading aloud clubs will result in a race of super savants.

At the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio at Culver City a survey shows that the reading of the stars displays their personalities.

Ramon Navarro is fond of philosophy and comparative religion. He also reads Joseph Conrad and James Huneker.

John Gilbert, dynamic and eager to get the conclusion, enjoys mulun in parvo and devotes his spare time to Maupassant, Chekov, and O. Henry.

Lon Chaney likes detective stories and can be found reading detective story magazines. His personal friends are Roy Harlacher, Frank Donohue and James Perley Hughes. He also reads the whimsical tales of William J. Locke.

Marion Davies fits her fiction to her roles and enjoyed McCutchen's stories in which she played principal roles She confesses a liking for Gilbert K. Chesterton and H. L. Mencken.

Norma Shearer is empressionistic in her likes and is devoted to the weird tales of Edgar Allan Poe.

Greta Garbo, Scandinavian in her tastes, reads Maarten Maartens, Ibsen and Selma Lagerlof. She also reads Goethe's "Faust" and the Egyptian tales of Georg Ebers.

Buster Keaton is not much of a reader but admits his favorite author is Popular Mechanics. He likes to tinker with machinery.

There's the phone ringing. Paramount has just completed a canvas of the intensive studies of its stars.

Clive Brook and William Austin, both Britons, are busy with stories of American history. They enjoyed Stephen Vincent Benet's "John Brown's Body" a narrative poem of the Civil war.

Five Foot Shelf

Esther Ralston had chosen for her Christmas reading "Women Lincoln Loved" and "Dead Lovers Are Faithful Lovers."

It may sound strange, but Richard Dix has been absorbed in the life of Col. James Fisk, Jr., former New York political leader.

Maurice Chevalier, a Paris importation to the boulevard, reads "Roamin' in the Gloamin'."

Chester Conklin, dragoon comedian, is satisfied with Dr. Eliot's five-foot shelf.

The cinema librarian at Fox studios announces:

Victor McLaglen is a student of ancient Chinese history. He thinks there are rich gold mines on the north side of the Himalaya mountains.

Madge Bellamy reads everything. Her father was formerly head of the English department in the University of Texas.

Janet Gaynor has a psychic turn and devotes her serious moments to the reading of the works of Ralph Waldo Trine.

Other stars amuse themselves thus: Lois Moran, "Story of Philosophy," by Durant.

George O'Brien, "Napoleon," by Emil Ludwig.

Charles Morton, "Mother of India," by Katherine Mayo.

Mary Duncan, "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," by Thornton Wilder.

Edmund Lowe, "Disraeli," by Andre Maurois.

A First National Picture
"Companionate Marriage Is Motion Picture That Every Person Will Want To See"
Film at the Marion Theatre is Based on Dramatic Incidents in Judge Lindsey's Book—Played by Brilliant Cast
One of the outstanding motion pictures of the year is the First National film, "Companionate Marriage," which opened an engagement at the Marion Theater last night. It is a picture which every person interested in the institution of marriage—and what adolescent or adult person is not?—should make it a point to see. It clears up, through the telling of a powerful, human and very dramatic story, the theory of companionate marriage, as a remedy for matrimonial ills, advanced by the noted judge of Denver's Juvenile Court, Judge Ben B. Lindsey, in his much-discussed book, "The Companionate Marriage." It contrasts a happy "companionate marriage" with two very wretched marriages occurring under the present laws regarding matrimony.

MT. GILEAD PASTORS HOLD SERVICES

Week of Prayer Includes Special Meetings in Various Churches

MT. GILEAD, Jan. 7 — Mt. Gilead ministers are planning to observe Prayer Week this week by holding a special service in each of the three churches here.

On Tuesday night Rev. J. C. Smith will preach on "Prayer and the Individual Life" in the M. E. church. Rev. D. E. Miller of the First Baptist church will have charge of the services in his church Wednesday night, and will give a discussion of "Prayer and the Church Life." Rev. Daniel Hamill, of the First Presbyterian church, will end the observance Thursday night in his church with the topic "Prayer and the Community Life."

The pastors of the churches here are seriously considering the advisability of a three-weeks evangelistic service here immediately following the prayer week service. Contrary to the usual custom of employing outside talent, the ministers plan to do all the work connected with this campaign themselves. The plan is to alternate in churches. The final decision in this matter rests with the prevalence of the influenza and other contagious diseases now spreading over the state. Reverend Smith stated that these services might be indfintely postponed if there was much sickness in the community.

TO MEET DELAWARE

Marysville Debaters To Discuss League Question

MARYSVILLE, Jan. 7 — The Marysville negative debate team, which, it is expected, will be composed of Misses Doris Brooks, Lois Callaway, and Margaret Southard, will travel to Delaware Thursday night to attempt a revenge for their defeat at the hands of the Delaware high team, here, a few weeks ago. These are both members of the Ohio Debating league, which is this year using the subject: Resolved that the United States should cease the use of armed force in the protection of its capital invested in foreign countries. In the debate between the same teams last month, they argued the opposite sides of the question.

The probable personnel of the Delaware speakers is Miss Alberta McFadden, Elmer McFadden, both excellent speakers, and Cecil Jones, who has three years' experience. Prof. Hall, head of the department of speech at Ohio State University, will give the decision.

COMMISSION SETS DATE FOR HEARING

Jan. 10 Is Time Named for Appeal Case of Rate Ordinance

WILL GATHER DATA

Power Company Files Protest Against Rate Passed by Council

KENTON, Jan. 7 — The Public Utilities commission has definitely postponed the hearing on rates in the appeal of the Hardin-Wyandot Lighting Co., from the electric rate ordinance of Kenton. The hearing had been set for Jan. 10. The extended time will permit engineers to gather additional data.

The case had its inception a number of years ago when the Hardin-Wyandot company, later taken over by the Ohio Power company, filed protest against the electric rate ordinance passed by council. The state utilities, through its engineers, placed a valuation on the properties here for a rate making purpose and the commission decision was appealed by the power company to the Ohio supreme court.

In a recent decision the court upheld the valuation figures of the commission and sent the case back for the establishment of a rate.

MANSFIELD LOOMS AS BEST FIVE

HARDING WILL OPEN LEAGUE PLAY WITH BRASS CITY QUINTET

Murphymen Have Won Seven Games in Eight Starts

BY KARL R. McELROY
Sports Editor The Star

THE annual battle to determine the basketball champion of the North Central Ohio league is under way and Harding will enter the fracas Friday night playing the potential champions, Mansfield, on the brass city court.

Although it is rather early to start predicting the title winner, the writer does not hesitate to cast favorable glances toward Coach Murphy's Mansfield quintet. Harding, Bucyrus, Ashland, Shelby and Galion loom as merely ordinary teams this year.

To date, Galion has the jump on all the other teams and are heading the league with one game won. Coach Eaton's five won its initial league start of the season last week by defeating Shelby, 25 to 23 in a heated session.

Bucyrus is making a strong claim for league honors this year but its record was marred Friday night when the Crawford county team lost at Bowling Green. However the team may be strong enough to compete with the other N. C. O. teams or at least spoil some team's hopes.

Ashland has won three out of four starts from teams that were not so impressive. But like Bucyrus, the Ashland five has more than a gambler's chance at the pennant. Little need be said of Shelby after its defeat on its own floor by Galion.

Harding high has played two scholastic games this season winning both of them. In the alumni tangle the locals were defeated. Columbus West and Lima Central, both having teams that give little promise of setting the world on fire, were defeated on the local court.

Friday night Harding will journey to Mansfield where it will receive its toughest assignment of the year. With four veterans back in the lineup, Mansfield has been turning in a long string of victories. Coach Murphy's team has won seven out of eight games played. The most notable victories turned were in games played with Lorain and Canton McKinley. Sandusky alone holds a win over the team rallying after an overtime period.

The betting round Mansfield is two to one that Harding will be defeated. The odds seem to be about right considering the Marion team's showing so far this year.

All in all, previous performances can be overlooked when Harding and Mansfield clash. Last year Harding was sitting on top of the world and lost to Mansfield by one point in Star auditorium. Perhaps the Red and Black will reenact the same play Friday night. Who knows?

Harding's biggest handicap will be the lack of experience. The locals will stack up against a team seasoned by eight contests this year. Harding has only played three. That makes a considerable bit of difference at this time of the year.

BY JOHN W. HEISMAN

IN the fall of 1902 a beautifully proportioned and prodigiously powerful westerner entered with the freshman class at Dartmouth and was promptly hustled into a football uniform. He hardly was ripe for varsity work, but he gave so very much promise that great pains were taken with him in anticipation of the fine dividends he ought to pay on both gridiron and diamond the following year. Nor were those ideas wild, for by another year young Glaze lived up to those expectations perfectly.

The first time the sport critics and writers began to take notice of Glaze and his work was in the Dartmouth-Harvard game of 1903. Here they saw the gifted sophomore smash every play that the Crimson sent in his direction. Often enough when the play went the other way Glaze tore out after it and caught it from behind—showing his tremendous speed and initiative. These were the days when the end still played wide on defense, and to overtake a halfback running around the opposite end necessitated the use of judgment about coming in closer when one suspected that it would be that kind of a play. Ralph's unerring judgment as to how close or how wide he had better take position on each play was often commented on. Going down under punts was another most important duty, and here again Glaze performed his assignments in a manner that stamped him as nothing less than great. But Glaze's real ability was yet to appear and it did so soon as Dartmouth got the ball, for now they pulled Glaze into the backfield and used him as a running half. That they knew what they were doing was obvious as soon as the quarter handed him the oval for the first time. He was off for an 18 yard gain, and he repeatedly took it for splendid advances all afternoon. Harvard was defeated. In the Amherst game Glaze traveled 93 yards at one clip in a winding, twisting dash down the field. His star run of the year was against the strong Princeton team—it went for 80 yards—and at that Princeton won the game, which, by the way, was the only game Dartmouth lost during Glaze's last three years as a member of the Big Green teams.

RUNNING-HALF on the offense is about the toughest job on a football team, but on defense you're supposed, at that position, to get rest. End is a position that calls for a lot of running and tough work on defense. To assign these grisly posts to one man calls for some tough work on the part of that man. Glaze was equal to the dual role and in that capacity he made All-American twice. Here was Walter Camp's estimate of him, written twenty-five years ago:

"Glaze is a fast, consistent end, having all the qualities required for that position and, in addition, those of a running half back, which gave Dartmouth some of the best results of her season's work. He never made mistakes, was one of the most alert ends of the season, a good tackler, clever on defense and always reliable. In addition to it all he is a good worker with the team and not simply an individual star."

HIGH praise this was but not as lofty as was to be showered upon him. Take all his good points in conjunction and one must rate Glaze as one of the very greatest players we have ever had.

He was likewise an exceptionally fine baseball pitcher and made good in the big leagues for four years. For about twenty years he coached college athletic teams at various institutions, and was a highly successful member.

Today Glaze is active in business in Denver, Colo., but admits he can never lose his interest in amateur sports, particularly college football.

Boxing Totters As Tex Dies

RICKARD RANKED AS GREATEST PROMOTER IN HISTORY OF RING

Problem of Naming New Heavyweight Falls on Garden Corporation

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, Jan. 7—Boxing literally is tottering on its throne, a prey to the uncertainty that inevitably seizes upon any institution from which the steadying hand of its master has been removed.

Rickard is dead!

All the night long, as the body of the world's greatest promoter sped northward for burial on Wednesday, that three-word refrain has been dinning in the ears of those who knew him and respected him and, in many cases, loved him. Rickard is dead. Only by constant repetition can the fact be made acceptable and credible to the world of boxing.

Boxing Itself

For Rickard wasn't merely associated with boxing; he was boxing itself. He took it out of the back rooms and dropped it into the laps of millionaires. He established a monopoly by cornering its star performers. He made it the biggest money business of all professional sport, a monument of marble where once it was a hovel of weather-beaten shingle. He held the unseen strings that made its puppets dance and he held them alone. This man had to die to make one fully realize how complete was his domination of the sport.

So today, with the master gone, the aldes are in a state of flustered confusion, while plans that he made for the future are marking time, awaiting action that may never come.

Does Rickard's death mean that Jack Dempsey will not come back? What will be done about the Sharkey-Stribling fight at Miami Beach, the proposed opening event of Rickard's program to establish a heavyweight champion? What will happen to his heavyweight elimination tournament? Will Humbert Fugazy, Jim Mullen, Paddy Harmen or some other promoter step in and take over the control of the heavyweight situation?

Had Statement Ready

There are only a few of the unanswered questions that arose and demanded attention early yesterday morning when Rickard succumbed to gangrenous appendicitis at Miami Beach.

He had a statement prepared for release late this week on the Dempsey matter. But Jack is accompanying Mrs. Rickard with the promoter's body on the Havana special today and what affect his friend's death will have on his plans is not known. He always said that he would fight only for Rickard and, if he really was to come back this year, undoubtedly his decision was prompted in part by his desire to help his friend. But Rickard is beyond all help now.

In any case, it is far from certain that Dempsey will wish to go forward with the plans already formulated, unless the appeal of doing so in honor of Rickard's wishes strikes a responsive chord. It isn't likely, either, that he would care to line up with a rival promoter, a fact which places it squarely up to the Madison Square Garden Corporation to come forward with a man in whom Dempsey has confidence and sympathy.

Southern Fight Set

Yes, boxing will go on but how far and how well, no one can say. The Sharkey-Stribling fight on Feb. 27 probably will be carried through, as Rickard already had contracted for it with the principals before going south for the annual holiday that resulted so tragically. There may be an announcement on the Sharkey-Stribling affair today, the probability being that Colonel Hammond will declare his intention of holding the fight as a tribute to the promoter's memory.

For this fight was to have been Rickard's gesture in a new field of promotion, his answer to those critics who claimed that only a big city can support a big match.

Inspirational genius such as Rickard's is seen once in a century. It isn't created again with a snap of the fingers. The kingdom he built still lives but the king is dead and none fit to don the royal robes is available. So today we have the insistent question without an answer, after this what? Frankly, anything is possible.

GALION LOSES TO SANDUSKY; CHALKS UP WIN AT SHELBY

Crawford County Team Heads Standings of N. C. O. League

GALION, Jan. 7—After defeating the Shelby cagers in an interesting N. C. O. game Friday night by a score of 27-22 the local basketeers lost to Sandusky here Saturday night 19-5.

The spirit that gave Galion the victory in the previous game after the score had been tied at the half and the close of the third quarter, was entirely lacking in the Sandusky contest.

The Orangemen were not only unable to break up the excellent teamwork of their opponents but also presented a weak offensive game scoring but one goal during the entire playing period.

The locals were outplayed throughout the game with the exception of the third quarter when both teams scored four points in the only close work of the tilt.

FOUR MORE BIG TEN TEAMS IN ACTION

Michigan and Wisconsin and Northwestern and Ohio State To Meet

CHICAGO, Jan. 7—Four of the eight Big Ten basketball teams which opened the Western conference championship season Saturday night will go into action again tonight. Two of them were victors in the initial clashes and two were losers.

Michigan and Wisconsin, both defeated, will face each other at Madison, while Northwestern and Ohio State, smarting under defeats, will clash at the Wildcats' lair in Evanston.

Results of opening games were:

Michigan 32, Northwestern, 20.
Purdue 33, Illinois 24.
Wisconsin 23, Minnesota 21.
Iowa 34, Ohio State 26.

A feature of Saturday night's play was the victory of Chicago over the strong and hitherto unbeaten Butler university five of Indianapolis. The score was 24 to 21. The result had no bearing on the Big Ten race, as Butler is not a member of the western conference.

Grand feature of plus fours is that there is no trouble in sitting down in them.

CANTON M'KINLEY IS DEFEATED 27 TO 21 BY MURPHY'S FIVE

Sharp Cages Nine Points To Win Hard Contest

BY BOB ELLIOTT
Sports Staff, The Star

CANTON McKINLEY, runners up to the state championship last year and fresh from a 42-41 victory over Dayton Steele Friday night, were "just another team" as they fell before Mansfield high's sharpshooters Saturday night at the Murphymen's stronghold by a score of 27 to 21.

Several Harding players and Coach Compton were there to see the upset and were visibly impressed by the contest.

The Mansfield cagers jumped into a 2 to 1 lead three minutes after the game started and were never on the small end of the score the rest of the game.

The Mansfield attack featured long passes to center Schuster and also several fast breaking plays with Jerry King and Captain Bob Bride in the leading roles.

Time and again the Murphymen would break around the Canton defense for buckets, the McKinley quint being at a loss to break them up.

Coach Murphy has also developed his defense to a point where it ranks probably second to none in the N. C. O. McMullen, the guard who was fast enough to play safety man on the football team, holds down the back guard position, while Sharp, another veteran, is at the running guard post. Although Murphy loses McMullen at mid-season, he has a capable successor in Earick, a newcomer. Earick is the line-plunging fullback on the football team that caused so much trouble to the N. C. O. teams last year.

Schuster, the center, is only a freshman, but what a joy he would be to any coach. A big boy ranging above six feet in height, he is good for the tip in any man's basketball game. His floor work is a little weak but time for that later. Bride, the star forward, is right there. He is only the boy who scored 10 points to send Harding down to 19-18 set back last year. 'Nough said. Jerry King, the other forward, is fast and can break. He is a dead shot from the foul circle and not so bad from way out.

SILENCE PROBLEM OF TALKING MOVIE

Millions Being Spent on Soundproof Studios in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 7 — Is the movie fan to be talked to death?

Many fans are asking themselves that question, while millions of fans are crowding the all-talking picture theaters.

It is not likely that the magnates of the film industry will kill the golden egg-laying goose by feeding it too many syllables. But these same magnates are listening to the cry of the crowd and pouring millions into sound-proof studios for making sound pictures.

Queer, isn't it, that sound pictures can only be made in sound-proof studios?

Metro Goldwyn-Mayer is launched on a vast program of making all talkies of famous stage successes. At the Culver City studio "The Trial of Mary Dugan" is to be filmed and sounded as a special production with a cast headed by Norma Shearer. The script for filming and microphoning is being worked out by the author of the play, Bayard Veiller

In the cast will be Raymond Hackett, leading man of the stage hit, and H. B Warner, famous in many screen successes. "The Trial of Mary Dugan" is scheduled to be Metro Goldwyn-Mayer's most ambitious film production.

On another part of the Culver City "lot" Marion Davies is making her debut in a talking film, "The Five O'Clock Girl." In the cast is Aileen Pringle, an exotic charmer who is on the point of the triangle of the musical comedy. The stage version will be produced with the original music and lines of the stage hit.

At Universal City a $5,000,000 talking picture program has been launched. The program includes dialogue and sound scenes with movietone for nine 100 per cent talkies, to go into production at once with an elaborate program of short sound subjects.

For the next few weeks the staff will concentrate almost exclusively on talking scenes. Silent versions will be made of all talking pictures for theaters without sound equipment, President Laemmle said. One of the features, "Erik the Great," will be made with English, French and German dialogue. Three of the talking pictures will be New York stage successes. They are "Broadway," "The Climax" and the "Shannons of Broadway."

In making sound pictures silence is imperative.

On the other hand, in making silent pictures sound is one of the essentials.

Here's how it works out at Paramount. The beginning of action in a silent picture is the signal for an outburst of sound. When the director yells "camera," the musicians burst into melody and there is a general hurrah.

In the talking picture the beginning of action is heralded by silence. Sound proof doors are rolled shut. Outside a whistle shrieks, warning that all sound on the lot must cease.

On the set a man at a table, called the monitor's table. He is watching a series of colored lights. In a telephone he speaks the new cinema word "Interlocked." It means that cameras and sound recording apparatus are in synchrony.

The director does not use a megaphone. "Quiet, please," is his admonition. Amid a silence that can almost be felt action commences on sound pictures.

When the director nods or waves his arm. The players, carefully rehearsed in advance, start their action. Their voices come out startlingly clear in the dead silence. With the sound the tension is broken.

Inside sound-proof booths cameras are clicking. But even that noise is shut away behind thick walls and plate glass windows.

Except for the tank-like camera-booths, the monitor's table and the suspended microphones the set is little different from sets used in ordinary pictures. The difference is that between noise and silence.

Candle shaped electric lamps for wall brackets have been designed that glow for their full length.

Money Market Worries Bulls As Sales Pile Up In Morning

Studebaker Only Strong Spot in Industrial List To Show Gain

Big Traders Hold Off on Buying Activities as Prices Fall

NEW YORK, Jan. 7—Though handicapped by a poor start, the stock market showed its mettle today by forging smartly ahead from the low price range of the first hour of the new week, recovering a good part of the early losses and pushing some of the industrial favorites to the best levels in a month or more.

Wall street was scared at what might happen" in the money market, and did not put very much dependence on the seven per cent call money rate which was posted at the start of the new week.

BY W. S. COUSINS
I. N. S. Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 7—Look out for a breezy market, said the Wall Street bulls today as industrial stocks started the new week at from 1-7 to 3 points below last week's final prices. Selling orders piled up over the week-end despite signs of a tighter money situation, made their appearance, bringing home to the bulls the fact that it takes a lot of money" to speculate on stocks which do not move swiftly in the right direction.

The "big bears" were not slow to take advantage of the situation presented by the nervousness of the bulls. Many of the high-priced stocks were thrown heavily on the market and prices started to sag. Radio dropped 15 points to 375 in the first half-hour, Anaconda Copper lost three, Victor Talking three and U. S. Steel two. Studebaker was the one outstanding strong spot in the industrial list, pushing up smartly to 80 1-2 for a 3 1-2 point gain.

Nothing wrong with American business, said stock experts today, but a little fattening out of the industrial stocks which have been skimming the clouds in the last two or three weeks would do the stock market a whole lot of good. On that supposition a number of important traders held off the buying activities today, in order to find out where the market would "drift" if left to its own devices. It drifted downward.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Jan. 7—Local wheat prices were lowered sharply in the first week of trading in the New Year. The decline was caused by liquidation and selling induced by easier prices in all of the principal world markets, due mainly to free offerings of wheat from Argentina at new low levels.

Despite the break in wheat and expectations of a peak movement during January, the corn market ruled firm. There was considerable local pressure due to weakness in other grains, but good support was encountered and prices finished the week with fractional gains.

Oats Are Firm

Oats were firm with corn and a light cash situation, but prices were at the same level as a week ago at the close Saturday. Rye was very irregular, but its price trend was downward with wheat.

At the close of the trading period, wheat prices were at new low levels for the crop, with March at $1.13, May, $1 16; and July, $1.17. Net declines 2⅞@3⅜ were registered. Corn was ⅞c higher in all the options. Oats were steady to ⅛c higher and rye was 2@4½c lower, with July showing the most weakness.

Aside from the world wide decline in prices, the wheat situation showed little change. With the cheaper offerings of Argentine wheat abroad, export demand for North American varieties was very quiet. Some scattered business in Manitoba was reported, and Italy was said to have made further purchases of durums.

There was some buying of the July delivery early in the week because of cold weather and reported lack of snow protection in some sections, but later these parts of the belt received snow and the distant option weakened sharply.

Cash Corn Demand

The principal bullish influences in the corn market were the continued active cash demand and the indications of active export demand. There was one big influence toward a conservative view of higher prices at the present time. It was the fact that declining wheat prices had placed low grade wheat on a parity with corn in Europe. This was no doubt responsible in part for the failure of a more active bullish interest to develop.

Meanwhile it is pointed out that stocks on ocean passage are only 25,000,000 bu, which is sufficient to supply European needs for only one month, according to Broomhall. In the face of this, Argentine stocks have dwindled and their shipments the past week were only slightly over 2,000,000 bu., or less than half of those a year ago.

Another bullish factor in the corn market the past week, and which will draw closer attention this week, is the possibility of drought in Argentina. Their prices ruled firmer, which lent color to reports of lack of rain.

By JACK

"East Is West," presented at the Grand all this week by the Myrtyl Ross Players.

"EAST IS WEST" is the heatiest production that the Myrtyl Ross Players have yet attempted in their season of stock here.

Three scenes are used, two calling for a large number of properties, and it is to be said for Miss Ross, the guiding light of the company, that she has given her audiences an "eye-full" this week.

"East Is West" tells the story of a supposedly Chinese girl brought to the love boat to be sold along with scores of other Chinese girls, to the highest bidder. The opening scene calls for the love boat and here Miss Ross has blended her colors into a harmony scheme that is beautiful.

Then, later, in the Chinese merchant's home one is ushered into a room, bizarre but colorful.

THIS reviewer feels rather sorry that he saw the first performance of "East Is West" at the matinee Sunday for the company had not yet gotten into the swing of this Chinese-American romance and the action of the play was slowed considerably.

Waits between acts detracted from the spirit and enjoyment of the play. However we are told that the company was "on form" for last night's performance and everything went over with the proverbial clock-work.

As we saw "East Is West" we believe Miss Ross' stage direction and production work outshines the actual presentation of the play by the company.

"EAST Is West," which once had a long run on Broadway with Fay Bainter carries the audience from the love boat where a young American buys Ming Toy to save her from a Chinese purchaser, to San Francisco where a Chinese merchant cares for her.

Of course, she falls in love with the afore-mentioned young American and there is the usual opposition of his family to such a match. But—then—well, it ends as one supposes it ends and satisfactorily.

Miss Ross in the capricious Ming Toy, a "white Chinese girl." It is her role that provides the comedy of the piece. And Billy Dale is the capable lover.

* * *

WE hear that Manager Manfred S. Gross doesn't like this acting business at all, but let it be said here that in Gross the company has one of its finest players.

As the Chinese sheik, Frisco's Beau Brummel, Gross, is, in our opinion, the star of "East Is West."

Ernest Sharpstreen is the honorable Chinese merchant, carrying his role effectively.

WITH JILL

"COMPANIONATE MARRIAGE," at the Marion. Story by Judge Ben Lindsay with Betty Bronson and Alec B. Francis in the leading role. Eric C. Kenton, director.

* * *

HAPPINESS, disillusionment, poverty, wealth, an entangling alliance and what-not enter into Judge Lindsay's attempted solution to unhappy and happy marriages. Betty Bronson and a group of other attractive young folks are the bright spots in the picture but they would be a lot easier to look at in a less sordid production. If you are looking for a solution to any such problems or happen to agree with the judge, all good and well. Not much can be said for direction and continuity and it isn't entertaining.

THE story opens with a courtroom scene in which Betty Bronson's own parents and their flock of children are the principal characters. The hasty marriage of one of society's butterflies ends disastrously and with suicide of the wife, all of which is blamed onto the mother of the bride, who is only waiting for her children to marry before casting off the fetters, happily, as Judge Lindsay some yoke of matrimony. The story figures all marriages will, if directions are followed.

Two Machines Catch Fire; One Almost Destroyed; Blame Short Circuits

An automobile owned by James Holliday, 305 West Center st., was almost destroyed by fire at 10:15 o'clock last night when a short circuit set fire to the machine while it was parked in a garage at the rear of the residence.

Holliday had put the car away in the garage a few minutes before the fire was discovered. Departments Nos. 1 and 2 answered the alarm. The damage was estimated around $150 by Fire Chief T. J. McFarland.

Another machine, owned by George Beinwald, 303 Willow st., caught fire last night while parked in a garage. Damage to this car amounted to $75. A short circuit was the cause. Department No. 1 responded to the alarm.

A chimney burning out caused Departments Nos. 1 and 2 to make a run at 3:58 o'clock Saturday afternoon to the residence of N. V. Heflinger, 180 Olney st. No damage was caused.

GRAND DUKE DIES

GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS

NICHOLAS SUCCUMBS TO HEART TROUBLE

Russian Royalists Held Him To Be Heir to Throne of Czars

ANTIBES, FRANCE, Jan. 7—Grand Duke Nicholas, held by the royalists to be heir to the Russian throne last held by his second cousin, died here early yesterday. He breathed his last during a howling northeast snow storm which must have reminded him, since he was conscious to the last, more of his beloved Russia than of the French Riviera where such fierce storms are almost unknown.

The collapse of the heart of the old warrior, sudden and irrevocable, came when his condition was showing an improvement in his valiant last battle against pneumonia.

The grand duchess, Prince Andrew of Russia, Princess Battenberg, the Grand Duke Peter of Russia and his wife and the Duke of Leuchtenberg were present when the end came. There were also faithful supporters who had followed him in his exile.

The grand duke came here from Paris last November to seek a more temperate winter. Pneumonia developed from an apparent trivial cold. Despite his age of 72 years, he had made such progress that on New Year's day he was thought to be out of danger. Then he collapsed yesterday and sank rapidly until his death shortly after midnight.

As commander-in-chief of the Russian armies during part of Russia's period of participation in the world war, Grand Duke Nicholas is reported to have had behind him a greater popular support than that accorded the czar himself.

At one time during the early part of the war, after he had made a successful offensive against the Austrians, overrunning Galicia, pictures of him used to be carried in Russian religious processions.

After the rise of the bolsheviki he was elected successor to the throne of the late czar by the supreme council of Russian monarchists, representing several million Russians living in exile.

Rather than pass through a gate the average boy will go out of his way to climb a fence.

Each Drop Like a Whole Vegetable!

FRESH vegetables would give us all a state of health, if only we would eat enough of them. Few of us do. But here is a little secret about assisting the peristaltic action so vitally important to our health; there is enough in one spoon of plain syrup pepsin to fill a market basket!

Several factors affecting sound health are often ignored in the average person's daily diet. But add a little syrup pepsin now and then, and watch what happens! Your appetite improves; so does your digestion, and eliminations. Lots of folks who thought they were in perfect physical condition see a tremendous change after ten days with syrup pepsin.

When a scientific, vegetable corrective can put you in fine physical form so quickly, and keep the whole alimentary tract cleansed and sweet and free from need of powerful purges—it surely is worth trying! An actual test can be made in ten days. In this short space of time your stomach, and liver and bowels can be in shape to handle anything that's eaten!

Children thrive on almost any diet when pure pepsin syrup is given occasionally to help assimilation, and make elimination thorough and regular. Elderly people have a far easier time, too, where this ideal combination of laxative herbs and pure pepsin is appreciated. Dr. Caldwell discovered this innocent means of keeping bowels normally active in 1875. Now, you couldn't find a drugstore without this famous prescription, all put up with directions enclosed.
